Drinking at Bars Would Be Permitted In New Liquor Bill

Measure Introduced By Senator Kleinfeld Calls For a Continuation of the Present Control Machinery and Regulations With a Few Exceptions.

Albany, N. Y., April 24 (AP).—Drinking at bars would be permitted under provisions of the new permanent liquor control bill introduced early this morning by Senator Philip M. Kleinfeld; Coney Island Democrat and chairman of the senate excise committee.

The measure calls for a continuation of the present control machinery and regulations, with a few exceptions:

(1) All regulations will be included in the law itself instead of being left to the discretion of the control board.

(2) The present board will be continued but in the future will be known as the "State Liquor Authority" and the members will be known as commissioners.

(3) Permission to use electric signs advertising any particular brands of liquor may be secured from the liquor authority. At present no signs are permitted.

(4) Wine may be sold in original sealed containers not to exceed 15 gallons each. At present all liquor and wine for consumption off the premises must be sold in bottles containing one quart or less.

The new measure, if approved, will become effective July 1, this year. It is understood to have the backing of both Democratic and Republican leaders.

Referring to the provision which permits drinking at bars, Senator Kleinfeld said:

"Alcoholic beverages may be sold to be consumed on the premises at a bar, counter or similar contrivance as long as such bar is incidental to the conduct of the business and is not of such nature and extent as to constitute the predominant part of the equipment.

"Only one such bar, counter or contrivance shall be permitted in any licensed premises except that if such licensed premises be located at the seashore, one additional bar will be permitted by the liquor authority upon the payment of a fee equivalent to the annual fee paid by the licensee."

The price of licenses for manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers remains about the same as in the interim control bill which was passed recently extending the life of the ABC board until October 1.

The new measure provides that retail liquor stores in New York city may not be closer than 1,500 feet to each other and that upstate stores must be at least 700 feet apart. Local option for cities and towns remains practically the same as in the basic beer law which is repealed by the new law.

Regarding enforcement, Senator Kleinfeld said:

"In order to curb bootlegging, racketeering and other illegal practices in the liquor traffic, provision is made whereby the liquor authority may increase its staff of enforcement investigators from time to time as conditions warrant."

The measure also provides that all sheriffs, deputies, village constables, village, city and state police must enforce the regulations laid down in the control law or be punishable by a fine of not more than $500, or imprisonment in the county jail for not more than 90 days, or both.

"The purpose of this bill," Senator Kleinfeld said, "is to enact restrictions, regulations and provisions for the protection of the health, welfare and safety of the people of the state and we have endeavored to carry out in every respect the provisions made by the platforms of both national parties that the old time saloon shall not return.

Roscoe Irwin Attorney In Stockholder's Case

Vast Associated Gas and Electric Company Forced Into Receivership — Precarious Financial Condition Cited in Charge.

Albany, N. Y., April 24 (AP)—A stockholder's action to throw into receivership the vast Associated Gas and Electric Company, whose operations have been under investigation by the Federal Trade Commission, has been filed in United States court at Utica, it was learned today.

Charging the company and its subsidiaries "are in a precarious financial condition by reason of stock manipulations and diversion of assets," the action was brought by Lillian Russell Meehan, a stockholder, through a Tonawanda, Pa., law firm in association with Roscoe Irwin of Albany and Kingston, and New York and Washington lawyers.

Among the more than 30 allegations in the complaint, filed yesterday, is one which states that "by reason of the diversion of funds of the defendant company and the financial chaos" of the company and its subsidiaries, "it has become necessary for the national and state authorities to institute investigations" into the firm.

The action charged that by reasons of those investigations it has been shown that the company and its subsidiaries are in a "precarious financial condition."

The company has sold more than $700,000,000 of stock to the public, it is claimed in the complaint.

Companion suits have been filed in behalf of stockholders in Delaware, Massachusetts, and in New York city.

100 Picked Federal Men Tracking North Woods For John Dillinger

Feeling Strong Among Hunters That the Mobster is Very Close to His Last Stand—Search Intensified in St. Paul Following the Kidnaping of An Oil Station Proprietor—In a Midnight Raid at Ellsworth, Wis.

Mercer, Wis., April 24 (AP)—Through the wooded wilds of the north country, freshly white with snow, an army of determined men hunted big game today—John Dillinger.

Crafty as a fox and ruthless as the wolf that sometimes prowls the brush-snarled timber lands of northern Wisconsin, the gunman from Indiana continued to elude one of the most extensive manhunts the northlands ever have known.

Dillinger luck" was holding, but the feeling was strong among the hunters that John Dillinger—copkiller, bank robber, highwayman and jail fugitive—was very close to his last stand.

The government had nearly 100 picked men on the job. Some of them were drafted from points as distant as Philadelphia and Washington. Man airplanes dropped from the skies, bringing reenforcements.

The department of justice men were under orders to shoot to kill. The sentiment was openly expressed that Dillinger dead would be more desirable to forces of law than Dillinger alive. The memory of the outlaw's latest victim—a government agent slain as Dillinger blasted his way from a tavern near here Sunday night—was not calculated to encourage the officers to take any chances with the heavily armed desperado and his gang of criminals.

Dillinger was believed hiding today either in this northwoods country or to have taken refuge in one of several hideouts he is believed to have prepared in the twin cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul.

The casualty list from Sunday night's two gun fights remained two dead and four wounded, with the condition of one of the wounded men critical.

Kidnap Proprietor.

St. Paul, April 24 (AP).—A midnight raid on an Ellsworth, Wis., oil station by three men, who kidnaped the proprietor, today intensified the search for John Dillinger mobsters in the Twin City area.

Ellsworth is about 200 miles southwest of Mercer, Wis., where the Dillinger gang outshot a large force of officers Sunday, and about 40 miles northeast of the Twin Cities.

Victor Langer was in his oil station nine miles east of Ellsworth, with two other men when three armed men attempted to hold him up.

Langer slammed the door in their faces.

The raiders disappeared and Langer and his two companions went into the attic, suspecting that the strangers might be Dillinger associates.

Japan Affirms Policy On "Hands Off China"

London, April 24 (AP).—Word that the Japanese cabinet had affirmed the "hands off China" policy was received sensationally today in the London Press and in political circles.

The government attentively awaited a reply to its "friendly" communication to Japan which Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, informed the House of Commons yesterday that he had dispatched in order to clear up the British government's relation to the policy.

Official circles explained that the British government's communication had taken the form of instructions to Ambassador Lindley, to confer with Japanese officials orally. This process, it was pointed out, lacks the formality of a note.

While the nature of the instructions was not revealed, it was indicated that instructions comprised a combination query as to Japan's intentions and an explanation of Great Britain's present views.

D'Artagnan of Skies Sleeps in Grave Today

Among Souvenirs Is "The Bottle of Death" of Famous Lafayette Escadrille—Was Buried in Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh, April 24 (AP)—Col. William Thaw, II, wartime D'Artagnan of the skies, sleeps today in a soldier's grave and among his souvenirs rests the "bottle of death"—treasured possession of the Lafayette Escadrille.

The colonel, one of the two survivors of the original escadrille, a dashing group of American fliers who fought for France before America entered the World War, died of pneumonia and was buried late yesterday.

Relatives, viewing his collection of trophies, discovered the "bottle of death," which bears the signatures of many dead aces of the outfit.

The quart flask, containing 80-year-old American Bourbon whisky, was sent to Major M. Thenault, French commander of the group, by a younger brother.

Each time an escadrille flier shot down an enemy plane he was entitled to one drink from the bottle. Raoul Lufburry, a French-American member, aroused by the death of a companion, took off alone one day. When he returned he received six drinks—the most one ace ever won in a day.

REMOVING MARKERS MAY BRING $50 FINE

There have been frequent complaints from engineers engaged on the work of locating the various sewer lines being built in the city that mischievous persons have removed their markers, known as "surveyors points." These "points" are nails driven into wooden stakes, or into the ground and their removal before the work is done causes much annoyance and extra labor.

An entire line of these points was removed a day or so since on work at Abeel street, near Hudson street, making it necessary to do all the work over again.

One of the engineers states that there is a penalty of $50 fine and six months jail sentence for removing surveyors points.

Signs Two Bills For Mortgage Relief

Albany, N. Y., April 24 (AP)—Governor Lehman today signed two bills continuing for another year the emergency mortgage relief laws.

One of the bills extends the moratorium on foreclosures until July 1, 1935. The other extends the authority granted to Supreme courts to determine the fair value of any real estate foreclosed irrespective of the price bid and to limit the deficiency judgment only to the difference between that value and the amount of the bond.

Both laws were passed at the extraordinary session of the legislature last August.

"In my opinion the legislation enacted during the extraordinary session of last year has been of tremendous help to the small home owner and to the farm owner," Governor Lehman said in signing the measures. "The legislation, I am confident, should be continued for another year."

Dillinger's Home Town Asks For Protection

Mooresville, Ind., April 24 (AP)—John Dillinger's home town asked today for military protection against its infamous son.

A resolution to Governor Paul V. McNutt from the Mooresville board of trustees set forth that the citizens "are not equipped with weapons of a nature to cope with a man who carries a machine gun and bullet-proof vests."

It asked the governor to send National Guardsmen, "if necessary", or a sufficient number of deputies to give the townsfolk "adequate protection" against the desperado, whose activities the resolution termed "a disgrace and danger to the people of the state."

The resolution was the town's official answer to reports that Mooresville favored amnesty for Dillinger.

The outlaw visited his father's farm near here April 7 and 8.

NORMA TALMADGE WEDS GEORGE JESSEL, COMEDIAN

Atlantic City, N. J., April 24 (AP)—Norma Talmadge, star of the silent screen, now is Mrs. George Jessel.

She and the stage comedian were married at the Hotel Ambassador late yesterday after keeping the wedding plans secret since last Thursday when they obtained a marriage license.

"I'm Mrs. Jessell now, all right," said Miss Talmadge after the ceremony. "And I love it."

"I've never been so happy in my life," Jessel said.

Less than a month ago Miss Talmadge obtained a Mexican divorce from Joseph Schenck, the producer.

Silver Holders Are Disclosed Showing Banks as Big Owners

William J. Bryan, Jr., Among Those Long on Silver March 4—New York Bank Holdings in Ounces.

Washington, April 24 (AP)—A list of silver holders furnished the senate today by the treasury disclosed chiefly banks and corporations as the big owners of the metal and included few individual names of national significance.

William J. Bryan, Jr., of Los Angeles was included.

The report said Bryan, whose father ran for president three times and who was a leading advocate of monetization of silver at a 16 to one ratio with gold, held a long position in silver on March 4. It gave no amount.

The list was the first submitted by the treasury at the request of the senate. It gave names beginning with letters running from A to H. Others will be submitted later.

Another familiar name was that of Stuyvesant Fish, of New York city, who was listed for three long future positions on July 5, July 12, and May 6, with Hubbard Brothers and Callaway Fish and Co. The year was not given.

Some of the larger bank holdings in ounces included:

Bank of Manhattan, New York, 11,063,759.23.

Chase National Bank, New York, 18,036,109.59.

Commercial National Bank and Trust Co., New York, 1,797,565.44.

Fiduciary Trust Co., New York, 524,416.21.

Guaranty Trust Co., New York, 4,000,000.

$11,463.75 Total Of Y.M.C.A. Drive

Meeting Will Be Held Wednesday Evening to Consider Engaging a Physical Director — Thanks Extended.

There was a good attendance of workers and others at the Y. M. C. A. Monday night for the supper and meeting which marked the close of the campaign to raise $15,000 for the support of the institution this year.

When reports were checked up it was found that subscriptions totaled $11,463.75, made up of just 1,000 subscriptions. This includes about $350 which 35 of the workers and directors agreed to take upon themselves Monday night to provide, which amount was necessary in order to bring total receipts up to a point where they would take care of operating expenses for the year.

The amount raised, however, does not provide for the engagement of a physical director, at a salary of $1,800. It was decided to hold a meeting Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock of the directors, leaders of the workers in the campaign, the campaign committee and others interested, to consider the situation. The meeting will consider whether or not to attempt to provide for a physical director and if so plan ways and means of financing the proposition.

Tornado In Upstate Village Rips Roofs Off Houses, Levels Trees

One Man Was Sent to Hospital With Broken Leg When He Was Hurled Across His Yard—Tornado Moved From South to North.

Rome, N. Y., April 24 (AP)—An atmospheric disturbance described by farmers as a tornado swept like the stroke of a scythe through Frenchville Gorge, ten miles north of this city today, sending one man to a hospital with a broken leg, ripping roofs on two buildings and levelling trees.

The tornado, moving from south to north, traveled a path 100 feet wide and two miles long. Farmers occupying the dozen houses in the area said it appeared to tower and twist upward into the sky for six hundred to 1,000 feet.

Lyle Cummings, one of the gorge residents, recuperating from a fracture of a leg, was picked up and hurled across his yard with a force that broke the leg again. He was brought to a Rome hospital. Another farmer plowing was reported hurled 20 feet with the plow.

In sweeping across Big Brook creek, which threads the gorge and at points reaches a width of 20 feet, the tornado sucked up the flowing water and flung it, like a wall, across the land.

An eighty foot barn and silo collapsed upon 20 head of cattle and two head of horses but the animals were not injured. Other buildings struck included three barns and a house. In each case the buildings were unroofed.

John Mancusco Held On Charge of Murder

John Mancusco, 26, of 57 Gill street, was arraigned before Special City Judge Walter H. Gill in police court shortly after 7 o'clock Monday evening on a charge of murder in the first degree in fatally wounding Anthony Damino, 27, of 13 Cordts street, Saturday evening on North street. Mancusco was represented by Attorney Chris J. Flanagan who demanded a hearing and the date was set for Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock in police court. As the charge is first degree murder Mancusco is held without bail in the county jail to await his hearing.

Mancusco is charged with stopping his automobile on North street about 6:45 o'clock Saturday evening and getting out with drawn revolver and firing several times at Damino, who was wounded in three places and died at 12:05 Sunday morning in the Kingston Hospital.

Following the shooting Mancusco called at police headquarters at the city hall and gave himself up. At that time the police say Mancusco made a statement in which he is alleged to have said that Damino had made threats against him and when he saw Damino on North street that night he decided to get Damino first.

The police say there has been bad blood between the two men for some time.

Kish Murder Trial Goes Over the Term

There was a short session of county court at 2 o'clock Monday, following which Judge Traver adjourned the April term of court to chambers.

In the case of John Brodhead, under indictment for possessing a dangerous weapon, Assistant District Attorney N. LeVan Haver, moved the case over the term.

Mr. Haver moved the case of The People against Alexander Kish, under indictment for murder in the second degree in having caused the death of George Markis on February 28 at the old Federation House on Hasbrouck avenue. William H. Grogan, attorney for Kish, appeared and stated that he had understood that the panel of jurymen had been dismissed and that the case would be put over the term. Judge Traver told Mr. Grogan that if he was ready to try the case a jury would be drawn. Mr. Grogan replied that he was not in a position to try the case at this time and moved it over the term.

Delaware County Highway Head Supports Loughran At Trial

William Howland, Delaware County Highway Superintendent, Approves Work Done at Van Etten Bridge by James F. Loughran—Other Witnesses Claim There Were No Politics in Their Jobs.

William Howland, county superintendent of highways of Delaware county, was the first witness called for the respondent this morning in the Loughran removal proceedings which have been on for more than a week before the Board of Supervisors. Mr. Howland resides at Delhi and has held his present office for eight years. He testified that conditions in Delaware county were similar to those in Ulster so far as mountain highways and bridges were concerned.

A week ago he with others visited the town of Denning and made a survey of the upper Rondout creek. He identified photographs as showing conditions above the Van Etten bridge and at the bridge and along the Van Etten property. His testimony was similar to that of the Dutchess county superintendent who testified on Monday afternoon.

There was evidence of high water on the creek and in one place the water had broken through and started to make a new channel, this was north of the embankment which was thrown up in 1928. He also saw evidence of scouring on the bank and where an embankment had been made in the creek to turn the stream back into its original channel. This was a good practice he said. This embankment keeps the creek in its old bed and prevents it from making a new channel and endangering the north abutment of the Van Etten bridge which is about 800 or 900 feet down stream. If the creek had been allowed to take the course which the new channel indicated the water would have endangered the bridge. He said this method of protecting bridges was good practice. He had known Mr. Loughran for eight years.

Asked if he knew the reputation of Mr. Loughran as a civil engineer and particularly as to work as county superintendent and as to his skill and competency in planning and executing highway and bridge work, he said he did but he was not allowed to state his standing as Mr. Ewig objected and it was sustained by a vote of 17 to 14.

"Good Luck Jim"

However, when he left the stand he shook hands with Mr. Loughran and was heard to say, "Good luck Jim, I am sorry I could not tell about your qualifications and ability."

Mr. Howland said he was a member of the American Society of Engineers, had been engaged as captain in the Army Engineer Corps as a road builder and gave numerous road jobs which he had built for the government. He said he was familiar with Ulster county roads. In Delaware county he said there were 2,358 miles of highways and many bridges, he would not estimate the number of bridges.

Cross examined he said he had been at the Van Etten place. It was a week ago and was his first visit there. He said in his opinion not quite enough work had been done there to properly protect the bridge and road. More work could have been done. In one place he saw where the embankment had been washed partly away and the stream was passing the embankment. There was evidence of the creek flowing over the Van Etten lowlands in flood times.

Mr. Ewig questioned him at length as to whether a less flow of water under a bridge would not lessen the danger of damage to a bridge.

Mr. Howland said in this instance to permit the stream to take a new course over the Van Etten lowlands would be to permit the stream to make a new channel on private lands and necessitate a new bridge being built. That he admitted would be on private lands. However he said that the nature of the land was such that to permit this would also endanger the present Van Etten bridge. The land was so situated that the stream would curve back and have a tendency to undermine the north abutment of the present concrete bridge and damage it. In his opinion if the bridge was built large enough to carry the water which might come down the creek there would be no damage from high water. The bridge from evidence he said apparently was of sufficient size.

Asked whether to get some water to flow past the bridge in a new channel over the Van Etten lands might not be a good thing and a protection to the bridge, he said not if the bridge was properly constructed.

Explains His Views.

"I don't want to press you, Mr. Ewig," said the witness, "but if the bridge were properly designed no good would be attained by diverting the water over a roadway and making necessary a new bridge. Before I could give an opinion I would have to know if the bridge is designed to properly care for the water in flood times. If it is designed sufficiently large enough there certainly would be no harm to have all the water in the creek go under the bridge. If too small more water might damage it."

He then said that the lay of the

U.S. Will Get New Anti-Crime Weapons

Federal Government Had Its Hand Closer to New Anti-crime Weapons, Thanks in Part to Its Enemy, John Dillinger.

Washington, April 24 (AP). The Federal government had its hand closer today to new anti-crime weapons, thanks in part to its hated enemy, slippery John Dillinger.

Chairman Sumners (D., Tex.) called his House judiciary committee this morning to consider half a dozen administration bills almost as better Federal gangster-control. He acted upon a personal appeal from President Roosevelt.

Sumners had the task of overcoming some deep-seated opposition within the committee to the proposed extensions of power. He himself has frowned in past weeks toward most of the measures.

Mr. Roosevelt's signal for congressional speed in bolstering the government's anti-crime campaign was clear, and apparently altered Sumner's views. The Texan's call at the White House yesterday was during a time of clear administration anger at Dillinger's latest escape.

Assistant Attorney General Joseph B. Keenan bristled with the remark that "I hope we get him (Dillinger) under such circumstances that the government won't have to stand the expense of a trial."

The Senate was considerably further advanced than the House today in its war on racketeering and other crimes of violence.

That chamber had to its credit passage of eight of the thirty-odd bills designed to lay a blanket of Federal jurisdiction over interstate law-breaking.

While awaiting further action on the measures—many of which were drawn by Attorney General Cummings—the special anti-racketeering committee headed by Senator Copeland (D.-N. Y.) turned its attention to using part of a new $25,000 appropriation to investigate juvenile delinquency.

Here are the purposes of some of the bills now before Sumners' House judiciary committee, most of which have been given final Senate approval:

To transform into a federal offense the killing of a federal officer, whether on government property or not;

To require federal registration of all machine guns;

To make bank robbery a federal offense;

To establish federal laws against so-called "protective unions" as a blow against racketeering;

To allow federal control over those fleeing from one state to another to avoid giving testimony in criminal proceedings;

To permit federal punishment for the interstate communication of kidnap or extortion demands.

The senate passed the measures concerning racketeering and the interstate communication of kidnap demands, but moves have been made to recall them for further consideration. The Senate also has passed measures to let federal officers hit against interstate transmission of stolen securities and to provide stiff penalties for employes in federal penal institutions who give aid to prison breaks.

Treasury Receipts.

Washington, April 24 (AP)—The position of the treasury April 21 was: Receipts, $6,644,750,185.50; expenditures, $42,248,772,300; balance, $4,279,602,741.41. Customs receipts for the month, $14,495,690.47. Receipts for the fiscal year since July 1, $2,445,648,611.22; expenditures, $5,693,134,682.45 (including $3,151,295,652.40 of emergency expenditures); excess of expenditures, $3,246,136,219.23. Gold assets, $7,752,614,346.76.

Canal Zone Vibrates To Navy Activities

Balboa, Canal Zone, April 24 (AP)—The Canal Zone throbbed with activity reminiscent of war time today as dispatches gave the right of way on the 47-mile long water highway between two great oceans to the gaunt gray fighting ships of the United States Navy and strove to complete in record time the passage of the fleet from the Pacific to the Atlantic.

The procession of the 111 warships that began at 5:11 a. m. yesterday continued throughout the day and night without a letup in the hope the unprecedented feat could be accomplished in a 24-hour stretch. Dawn found many ships in the great armada still waiting their turn but by nightfall all were expected to have completed the slow journey through the locks.

Intensive Canvass For Catholic Charities

Intensive canvass of every Catholic parish in Kingston and Ulster county is now under way in the annual Catholic Charities appeal for the Archdiocese of New York which is under the general direction in this district of the Very Rev. Dean Stanley.

"Catholic Charities even more generously this year than in previous years," Dean Stanley predicted in a statement yesterday. "Two million dollars which we seek in the archdiocese seems like a lot of money and it is.

"Yet Catholic Charities through its 213 agencies in addition to other activities cared for 11,000 families last year and 37,000 dependent children. Even if two-thirds of a million were used for the care of these families that would mean an average of less than $50 a year."

Dean Stanley pointed out that since the organization of Catholic Charities by Cardinal Hayes it has spent approximately $15,000,000 on the coordination of charitable and welfare agencies in the archdiocese, with the result that its methods have been copied in other dioceses throughout the country and its staff of experts has been represented on scores of civic commissions because of their wide experience in this field.

"The type of roll furnished by Catholic Charities," continued Dean Stanley, "supplements federal, state and community aid and cooperation with public relief agencies is one of the most important functions of the agents in the different counties. The reports of these agents indicate that the depression has brought about a much closer cooperation on the part of all public agencies. This is particularly emphasized in reports from White Plains, Goshen and Monticello, where improved correlation of public and private charitable and relief work is reported.

"In Ulster county is has been noted that a discount of 50 per cent for dental work was obtained for many people requiring the services of a dentist. Also physicians were induced to give free treatment to patients who were able to call at the doctor's office. In Dutchess county the services of attorneys were furnished without cost in several instances, as was dental work and optical work. And in Yonkers one of the outstanding achievements was the aid rendered in organizing a social workers' conference to prevent over-lapping of relief work and the formation of a Big Sister organization to assume responsibility for delinquent girls in the children's court."

Where Gold Was First Found

It is probable that gold was the first metal to attract the attention of prehistoric man, but it could hardly have been used even for ornaments until the art of melting had been invented in the Bronze age. The earliest mining work of which traces remain was on gold ores in Egypt, and gold washing is depicted on monuments of the Fourth dynasty (2900 B. C.). There are many other records of work on gold in ancient times. The legend of the Golden Fleece, stripped of its heroic dress, describes an expedition about 1200 B. C. to seize gold which was being laboriously washed out from the river sands with the aid of sheepskins by the long-suffering people of Armenia.

FRENCH SLEUTHS CLEAR UP MURDER AFTER TEN YEARS

Launch Worldwide Search for an Alleged Killer in Bizarre Case.

Paris—An international hunt which may extend to the American continents, has been launched by the Surete Generale for an alleged murderer who owes his liberty to the very organization now seeking his head.

The story might have been conceived by a detective thriller writer.

A beautiful woman found shot to death on a beach—

Her identity revealed several years later by a former spurned admirer known as Nemo—

The crime solved after ten years, revealing how a once toasted soprano was condemned to death by a family council—

And the killer running free on distant shores became expelled from the country for a lesser offense committed after the murder!

History of Case.

On June 11, 1923, inhabitants of Treport found in a desolate spot along the channel coast, the body of a woman killed by four revolver shots.

The victim was buried, the case pigeonholed. Year after year passed, erasing the murder from the public's memory. Then, only a few months before the date when the case of the prosecution would automatically be voided by default, the Dieppe police began receiving anonymous letters.

The notes at first were vague and ascribed to a harmless crank. They came from Paris and were signed "Nemo." After a few weeks, Nemo's information became more specific—the anonymous informer apparently gaining courage when he saw he was not tracked down.

Far from suspecting the information given by Nemo concerned their own most famous crime case, the Dieppe police called in the Surete Generale, which, after an investigation of seven months, were able to announce solution of the murder committed ten and a half years before.

The victim was Helen Ziffer-Zawuska, born at Cracow in 1889, wife of Waldemar M. Ziffer, ex-officer in the czar's army. Under her maiden name of Helene Krupa, she had been a successful singer, at one time enjoying great popularity in Moscow and St. Petersburg. Her popularity had made her rich.

Wanted Her Out of the Way.

Ziffer, it is alleged, decided to put Helene out of the way when he had lost all her money in an unsuccessful commercial venture in Cracow. Accordingly, a family council was held. Ziffer, his brother, Joseph, who was a resident of Paris, and their sister, Mme. Lola Rosenberg, wife of a Cracow attorney, since dead, "condemned" Helen to death at a family council, in order that Waldemar Ziffer might marry a wealthy widow, says the Surete Generale.

Brother Joseph was designated as the executioner.

With a bonus of 3,000 francs in his pocket, Joseph is alleged to have seduced his brother's wife and absconded with her to France. On a dark, windy night on the beach of Treport, well known watering place, he "executed" her and threw her body in the waves, it is charged.

A year later he was arrested on a charge of attempted robbery, sentenced to 18 months in prison and expelled from France. In the meantime, according to police, he had sent a postcard to Mrs. Rosenberg in Cracow, saying "All went well," whereafter it is said that she immediately appropriated all the late Helen's belongings.

Waldemar Ziffer, too, married his rich widow. Now, according to reports from Poland, he and Mrs. Rosenberg are under arrest as accomplices in the murder.

PREMONITION FOILS ATTEMPTED MURDER

Wealthy Lithuanian Was to Be Killed by Gas.

Kovno, Lithuania.—How a premonition of his own approaching murder, coupled with speedy police work, saved the life of a prominent Kovno notary was revealed here with the arrest of the notary's stepson and a friend credited with being the master mind of the intricate plot.

K. Skema has had a flourishing practice for years. He gradually built up a fortune, and the safe in his office was temptingly full. A short time ago there were 3,000,000 litas in it consigned by clients to Skema's care.

The eighteen-year-old stepson, Vadja Gailevitsch, was blessed with a good allowance and the best of clothes, but that was not enough. Allegedly at the instigation of Algirdas Puijda, twenty-four, he began to look longingly at the safe.

The police say the two planned long and carefully. They rejected a scheme to mask themselves and shoot Skema. Gas, administered in some cunning and romantic way, was much better.

Equipped with all necessary paraphernalia, the two youths broke into the notary's office one Sunday night. Two glasses of chemicals were set on the desk and attached to the door handle with string.

The idea was simple. Skema would open the door, the glasses would tip over, and the fluids mingle, forming a gas which, according to calculations would kill the notary within five seconds. Armed with gas masks, the pair was to enter, swiftly fire gas with another compound, and place a glass of prussic acid in the dead man's hand, to simulate suicide.

Police, however, had been warned by Skema of his prosecution and caught the would-be murderers just after they had set their trap.

A Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER

WASHINGTON—One fact should be kept in mind in all speculation on what President Roosevelt may do about congress overriding his veto when he returns from his vacation cruise in southern waters.

It is clear in his entire political career he has shown himself to be a conciliator rather than a disciplinarian, or one to set on revenge.

His is the genial and affable way. He may crack the whip at times, but the act invariably is accompanied by his famous smile and good humor.

The suggestion made by Byrns of Tennessee, democratic leader of the house, that he may ask additional taxes to cover the $22,000,000 lost to the treasury when congress overrode his veto should be considered with this personal trait of Mr. Roosevelt in mind.

Situation Shifted

IT IS true the President made such a statement to members of congress last June when his economy act was threatened by increased allowances to veterans. Democratic leaders of the house were called to the other end of Pennsylvania avenue and told in unmistakable language that if such increases remained in the bill congress must levy additional taxes to pay for them.

The present situation, however, is not analogous to that which prevailed a year ago. Then, the legislation in question still was in a deliberative stage. Now action has been completed.

Last June when the President made his suggestion of new taxes, the house had power to save the economy bill from inroads made by the senate. Now, both house and senate have spoken and there's nothing further anyone can do about changing the law.

Only punitive measures are left to the President and they have never been to his liking.

Risk Another Defeat?

WHAT if he should decide to go to the country and demand that new taxes be levied to make up for losses incurred by defeat of his veto?

Undoubtedly he could make it embarrassing for those members of congress who deserted him if he so chose. But why should he care to risk another defeat at the hands of congress?

Proposals for increased taxes always bring groans and protests from constituents. This is election year when the entire house and one-third of the senate must run. Members of congress are loath to increase taxes at such times, whatever be the reason.

Such a proposal, some observers hold, might lay the President open for an even more decisive defeat at the hands of congress than he suffered on his veto.

Dutchess County's Road Head Takes Stand for Loughran

George Kreiger, Dutchess Highway Superintendent, Testifies as Expert in Loughran Ouster Case—Other Witnesses are Heard.

Among the witnesses sworn Monday afternoon before the Board of Supervisors in the Loughran removal proceedings was George Kreiger, county superintendent of highways of Dutchess county, who was called as an expert to give his opinion on the work which had been done on the upper Rondout creek near the Van Etten bridge. Mr. Kreiger, for 14 years county superintendent of Dutchess county, said that in his opinion the revetments thrown up at the Van Etten property and at Stone Cabin Creek were the proper and most economical protection possible for the bridge and highway below the revetment. He said that while he had been county superintendent for 14 years he could not "speak for the future" and in view of the present proceedings in Ulster county this brought forth a laugh.

In his county he said probably as in Ulster county material at hand was used to work with in the interest of economy and that the method used at the Van Etten place was good practice for two reasons, it opened the old creek channel and placed a deflecting bank of stone and gravel along the creek which would tend to divert the water from the north creek bank and back into its original channel and keep the channel clear and direct the water down under the bridge. He explained that deposit in any creek was caused by slack water. There material would settle to the bottom and clog up a stream. If the water was kept flowing swiftly it would sweep out the channel and keep the creek in its bed.

Several witnesses were sworn to give testimony on the question of whether the Van Etten bridge was a public bridge and led to a public road. These witnesses testified that the road was a public highway to the Van Etten gate and that the road running north along the Rondout creek to the Wright place had been a public road and was traveled by the public although of late years it had been unused to get to the vacant Wright place. There was testimony to the effect that the town had authorized the road and aided in its construction and maintance and that it was worked as a part of the town road system until it was abandoned when the Wrights left their place up Cabin brook.

John J. Coddington was recalled after the noon recess. He was examined further by Mr. Flemming. He testified he had worked on the new Van Etten bridge in 1928 and had seen the town build a temporary bridge for use pending the construction of the present concrete structure. He said he had never worked the road on the north leading to the Wright place but he knew it was a road.

Missed Road.

Mr. Coddington said as town superintendent in 1930 he had made a survey of the roads in the town for the county superintendent. He covered all of the highways in the town by car and measured them but had overlooked the road from Peekamoose road to the Van Etten bridge and along the creek to the Wright place. He said he knew it was there but had missed it. As town superintendent after the 1928 flood he worked on various roads and helped put the creek back in its original channel at various points.

He said that while town superintendent he thought he had put some planks on Van Etten bridge but he could not swear positively to that.

Asked as to how he determined the town roads he said he went by what the old timers told him were public roads. He said he thought the Add Wright road had been abandoned but was still part of the town road mileage because at any time the town board could vote to again resume working it. That he thought was the law. He said he had never searched the records to find out if the Wright road was a public road but the people told him it was and he believed it to be so.

At the time he made his survey of the town roads he said he had no doubt it was public but he forgot about it. The first it was drawn to his attention was when Mr. Loughran caleid his error to him a few days ago. He then found he had not put it on his ist.

Last summer was the last he had been on the road. It had been washed out some by the 1928 flood. While it had been in disuse for some time you could still see where it had been and could ride over it before the 1928 flood. The road he said ran between a wall and the creek and the wall was broken down in places but you could still use the road.

Flood Washed Road

Cross examined by Mr. Ewig he said that before the flood you could see it was a road but after the flood unless you knew it had been a road you probably would not know it was a road. There was brush grown up but a horse and wagon still could negotiate it. He told Mr. Ewig he never worked on the road while town superintendent.

Mr. Coddington said he was well aware of the fact that after he crossed the bridge and entered the Van Etten gate that he was on private property. He used to scrape the road over the bridge and then drove through the gate to the Van-Etten place in order to turn his large scraper around. No one ever objected to that.

The gate he said was 30 or 40 feet beyond the bridge but the road to the Wright place opened up between the bridge and the Van Etten gate. Probably a stranger would not notice the road but it was there.

He also told Mr. Ewig that as town superintendent of highways in 1928 he did not construct a temporary bridge in the town over 25 feet in length.

"You know the Avery bridge?" asked Ewig. "Yes."

"That is over 25 feet in length?" asked counsel. "Yes."

"It spans Pigeon creek. There is a bridge about 500 yards above also on Pigeon brook. That bridge was out, abutments and all," said the witness.

"When you put Van Etten bridge on your petition you knew it served only one family?" asked Ewig. The witness said that was true.

"Why did not you put the Pigeon creek bridge on the petition too, that was over 25 feet in length?" asked Ewig.

"Well, let me tell you, they had to change the road there above Avery's. The old Pigeon creek bridge was never re-built. I built a new Pigeon creek road. Mr. Loughran asked be if I would stick up a temporary bridge here till he could build one. I did not know I had no right to build a bridge over 25 feet. I learned that later. But I could have built a bridge less than 25 feet long but I wanted it to become a county bridge. I could have built a 20 foot bridge but it might have gone out last fall so I built one over twenty-five feet. I wanted the county to take it over," said Mr. Coddington.

At his house is the John Coddington bridge over Pigeon creek and it is over 25 feet long. He said he had not mentioned it in the petition because one Sunday after the flood he and some men got together and went down stream and found the old bridge intact and they worked on Sunday without pay and put it back where it had been. It is still there. There never was a charge made for that work because it was done on Sunday. "Me and the boys put it back on Sunday," said the witness.

Vote One Sided Firm.

At first he said he regarded the vote one sided in the present proceedings but now Mr. Loughran was getting a chance and he did not consider the proceedings one sided any more.

A mile below the Van Etten bridge he said was a road going to Red Hill. There had been o bridge there but the road was washed out in 1928. However in his survey he had included the road even though it was gone. It could be taken up again by the town.

Mr. Flemming inquired whether the Red Hill road had been abandoned and the witness said it had not, neither had the Wright road. They just were not used.

In 1932 he said his son-in-law measured the roads in the town and he rode along on some of them. At that time he did not see the road from Peekamoose road to Van Etten bridge measured.

George Kreiger, Dutchess county superintendent of highways, was then calleed. He said he had gone with Mr. Loughran and others to Denning one day when it rained very hard. That was recently. They looked over the grounds at the Van Etten bridge. They had gone up the creek to Cabin Creek and his attention had been called to the Rondout creek and its banks.

He said that it was a good practice to do what had been done there and it was a protection to the bridges and roads down stream.

Asked as to whether Mr. Loughran in his opinion was a competent man an objection was taken by Ewig. His objection was sustained by a 17 to 13 vote. Asked whether it was common knowledge in the engineering profession as to Mr. Loughran's competentcy an objection by Ewig was sustained. An objection by Ewig as to whether the highways under Mr. Loughran's jurisdiction were in good shape was also sustained 16 to 15.

Cross examined by Mr. Ewig the witness said he made no survey but looked over the ground and saw the damage done by floods and where the water had gone over adjacent lands. He said he saw where a road or part of a road had been along the creek. In his opinion the revetment in the Rondout would protect the Van Etten property if it were carried up a bit. There was a break in it.

Mr. Kreiger said the situation there was that a curve in the creek existed and in times of high water the whole section would be flooded. The changing of the flow of the creek back to its old channel by the revetment was an aid and was good practice. The water flowing over the Van Etten property in times of high water would break back near the bridge and would tend to undermine the bridge. The revetment would aid this condition.

At that point a recess was taken for ten minutes.

Blaine Wright Called

Blaine Wright, son of Addison Wright who it has been testified to by several witnesses occupied a farm at the junction of the Cabin creek and Rondout creek, was the first witness called after the short recess. He said the road was laid out along the north side of the Rondout creek about 40 years ago. Before that he and his father and the family used the ford.

Mr. Wright said that he was now a farmer in Denning was the eldest of the Wright boys.

While Seth Green was road commissioner some 40 years ago James B. Smith of Eureka was engaged to survey out a road along the creek to the north from the present Van Etten bridge. At that time he said the town of Denning gave $20 for a right of way over the Coddington property for the road and to build a dock at a low spot about half was from the present bridge to the Wright place. The rest of the road he said "we built ourselves". In those days there was a custom to work out road tax and that was done on the road. So far as he could recall the survey for the road from near the present Van Etten bridge along the Rondout was paid for by the town and the route was laid out by the road commissioner.

He said it was some 30 years ago that the bridge was re-built. At that time Mr. Coddington and Addison Wright built the bridge. The town commissioner asked for bids and they got the job and the town of Denning paid. It was in 1910 that the Wright family left the farm up Stone Cabin creek. Back of the farm Mr. Wright said was woodlands and north of the Van Etten farm was also other land but the only road back into the hills was the woodroad used by Mr. Coddington at times to draw out wood. That was the only use of the road beyond them that he recalled. He said he could recall Captain Griswold owning the Coddington place before Coddington.

Cross-examined by Mr. Ewig he said they had used to ford the creeks until the road along the Rondout was laid out. The town decking was only a short stretch along a low place about mid-way from the Van-Etten bridge to their home. In regard to the building of the road and the town doing work on it Mr. Ewig said:

"How sure are you about that?" and the witness said "How sure are you that you are living?" He continued by saying that he recalled the coming of the road very well.

"You would remember it too if you always had to ford the creek and then got a road," continued Mr. Wright. He said the decking was constructed by John Coddington. The road was built by his father who constructed a sluice and removed a few rocks and called it a road.

After the road had been built he said they did not have to have consent of Coddington to use it. At present he said the Wright place was vacant and the road about gone. He did not believe anyone who did not know the existence of a road there would know now that it had ever been a road. The last he knew the decking was still there but even that may have gone out in the flood of 1928.

Caretaker a Witness.

Harold Countryman, caretaker at the Lawrence Van Etten place was the next witness called. He has held that job for about 11 years. He was caretaker when Judge John G. Van Etten owned the place and used to go there week-ends to fish. So far as he knew the road was known as the Van Etten road from where it branched off the Peekamoose road and ran over the bridge to the gate at the Van Etten property entrance. Near the bridge was a road which used to run up along the creek to the right and on up to the Wright place. That road he said had not been used since he lived there.

Asked if he had ever been over it he said many times, had driven over it and also recalled riding over it on a bicycle 23 years ago.

After crossing the bridge he said the gate and entrance to the Van Etten property was there at the entrance to the private property of Van Etten. He said the road across the bridge was a public road up to the Van Etten land. "It's public and I also worked on it—" said the witness but Mr. Ewig objected but later withdrew his objection. He continued that the road was used by the public generally and he had worked on it for the town and had been paid by the town for such work up to the gate where the private property started.

Since he had lived here, there had been two floods, one in 1928 and one last year. The first flood took away the bridge and a temporary bridge built by John J. Coddington. Then the concrete bridge was put in by the county. At the time of the flood the water came to within 30 or 40 feet of the buildings on the farm but most of the water went down where it had broken through. He said that a line on the map in exhibit which had been made by a former witness was not correct. The water ran more along the wire fence nearer the creek bed.

He was shown several photographs of the stream and the bridge as well as the embankments which were built in 1929. The flood in 1928 damaged the road near the Van Etten bridge and washed a part of it away near the gate. The shovel came up and started to work at the bridge. It cleared under the bridge, repaired damage to the north abutment and then worked up stream throwing the rock and gravel from the channel and re-opening the old channel. The work of the shovel put the creek back in its old channel.

In August, 1933, they had the second real flood, it was worse than the 1928 flood. In 1933 the water lacked only three feet from coming to the floor of the bridge. Trees came down stream he said and the branches were cracked off under the bridge. The last work he had done on the road was about a year ago.

Cross examined he said he had known Mr. Loughran since about 1928. He could not recall seeing Mr. Loughran at the farm before the flood in 1928. In 1928 there had been water three feet deep along the wire fence but not much was coming toward the house, a little came to about 30 feet from the house. That water was not flowing very swiftly and re-entered the creek below the bridge. He was questioned at some length as to whether the Van Etten land was posted and said it was. He was asked as to just what that was intended for and as to whether he had been told by the owner not to let anyone on the property to fish and hunt. He said plenty did fish on it probably when he did not know it. The land is posted along the Rondout and Stone Cabin creeks. He said he did not let people fish there without permission.

Mr. Countryman said he had not spoken to anyone about the case except like anyone else had since it had come up. He said he did not want to get into it. He said he had not talked to Lawrence Van Etten about it and had not seen him in six months. Neither had he spoken to Mr. Flemming or Mr. Loughran about it.

A great many people now walk up the old road along the creek toward the Wright place when they go fishing.

Asked if Mr. Van Etten was any relation to County Superintendent of Highways Loughran he said he did not know but had been told they are brothers-in-law. He said he never recalled seeing Mr. Loughran at the Van Etten place with parties prior to 1928. He did not think he knew Mr. Loughran.

At that point a recess was taken on motion of Supervisor Myers until Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock.

KINGSTON N. Y., APRIL 24, 1934

JEFFERSON IN MOSCOW

That was an interesting session of the D. A. R. in Washington the other day, when that patriotic body was devoting its attention to Russia. The ladies had Senator Barbour of New Jersey to tell them about the new American embassy in Moscow. He reported that our government is spending a million and a quarter dollars on it, and making it into a replica of Monticello, Thomas Jefferson's old home in Virginia. "The irony of that," he exclaimed. The ladies shuddered. But it may not be such a Bad Idea after all. In a way, it might be regarded as a friendly gesture to the Soviet government. Jefferson, you see, was the great radical among our "founding fathers."

True, he wasn't very radical according to current Communist standards. But he approved the French Revolution, which for those days was like approving the Bolsherik Revolution. His Declaration of Independence was a very radical manifesto. But our Moscow Monticello may suggest more than that to the Muscorites if they look into the matter a little further. For they will discover the Bill of Rights written by Jefferson into our Constitution, guaranteeing free speech, free press, free assembly and other essentials of human liberty unknown in the present Russian system.

THE GOOD OLD WOOD LOT

A business writer thinks the federal forest conservation work now going forward in every part of the country is by no means clear gain. He finds activity of an opposite sort in some of the middle-western states. Farmers and lumbermen, he suspects, are destroying existing forest resources as fast as the government is creating new ones. He says:

Not only are many farmers again cutting firewood after buying coal for many years, but the old-fashioned sawmill is again in operation, where native oak is being cut for the repairs which farm houses and barns and other farm buildings need worse than ever before.

There is probably no reason to worry on this score. Good farmers, by this time, have learned to farm their wood lots as thriftily as their corn fields and meadows. Where they are taking out firewood, it isn't likely that they are destroying many good lumber trees for it. And where they are using up their own oak for repair and construction work, they are probably doing that, too, with discretion. At the worst, they are not diminishing the total timber supply. The oak would have to come from somewhere. Meanwhile they save money and regain some of the proud feeling of self-sufficiency that used to animate their granddads.

DECENTRALIZING STRIKES

Speaking of the epidemic of strikes lately in big industrial centers, John Love in the Cleveland Press suggests an unexpected gain by smaller communities. He says:

Samples of the kind of industrial revival we can get from controversy can be found in the way some of the knitters of Philadelphia have been moving into small towns to escape strikes.

These things damage cities, but they benefit small towns, and the movement revives business for everybody in capital goods lines. It doesn't cost much to move a knitting plant; but if the cities became too turbulent, there would be work for the equipment builders in heavier industries.

Not only do plants move to smaller places to escape big city labor conditions, but during city strikes much of the work held up there flows to outside plants. Here is a tendency that any manufacturing metropolis has to face. The decentralization of industry, already begun, is helped along by every labor war.

PRACTICAL SPORTS.

Mary Channing Coleman, who is president of the American Physical Education Association, surely comes with reason to American college when she says [illegible] to use a team of athletes merely to advertise an institution. In many institutions at least, graduates will insist on knowing what else a team of athletes is for.

Miss Coleman, however, becomes more persuasive as she proceeds. Students today are less interested in watching some one else play than in playing themselves. The economic situation has given the modern student a keener sense of relative values and in picking his favorite sport he first asks himself "What will I get out of it?" Even professional alumni can understand that.

The present-day college boy or girl, Miss Coleman explains, prefers to take up the more social sports like tennis, swimming and golf rather than football, basketball and baseball, because the student's know that after graduation they can still enjoy such sports, whereas they would seldom have a chance to indulge the "major" sports. This is good practical sense.

FLOPPY DESSERTS

"Egg whites have exciting possibilities," says a home economics page in one of the daily papers. They seem to excite some of the menfolks, anyway. A physical director, addressing the American Physical Education Association, jumps onto such vague, poetical desserts as blanc mange and floating island. Mountains, he says, have never been climbed on whites of eggs, nor battles won on them. Give him a hunk of pie! Pie with something in it.

"We should return to the desserts of our ancestors," he declaims, in an eloquent peroration. "We hear too much these days about things which challenge our better natures. What we need is desserts that challenge our stomachs. I'd rather die on cherry pie than live on floating island." Yes, cherry pie is doubtless good for what ails our effeminate age. But if we're going to get historical about it, the pie on which this nation first waxed great was mince pie, and in recent generations it has continued its triumphant march mainly on apple pie.

That Body of Yours

DAILY FOOD NEEDS

One of the mistakes made by some vegetarians is in believing that meat and eggs are not necessary as they can get all the protein they need from such good foods as peas, beans, cereals, and other vegetables.

Before the war there was a feeling that too much meat was being eaten and that rheumatism, heart disease, high blood pressure and kidney ailments were due to this fact.

During the war and again during the past three or four years research physicians and leaders in the economic affairs of the country have been studying the matter of foodstuffs as never before.

What do they find?

They find that there is still the need for plenty of vegetables and fruits to give the starch, minerals and vitamins that the body requires, but that the people as a whole, particularly growing children have not been getting as much meat and eggs as is required.

The important fact that has been established is that there are really two classes of proteins. Proteins from animal sources—meat, fish, eggs, are known as first class proteins, while those obtained from vegetables are called second class proteins.

The first class proteins, besides possessing more food value than second class proteins, are more nearly absorbed by the body, whereas vegetable proteins are absorbed in various proportions, the best showing about 80 per cent and others considerably less.

Therefore in working out the amount of protein that the individual or even the nation needs, these research investigators state that at least half should be first class protein, that is obtained from meat, fish, and eggs.

Food research investigators everywhere agree that milk is still the main part about which to build meals for children, but state that the prejudice against meat and cheese (animal proteins) for children is a mistake as both cheese and meat are needed for building the structure of the body in the growing child.

Remember, the present practice of giving children and adults milk, fruit, and fresh vegetables is considered very wise owing to their value in giving energy and supplying minerals and vitamins.

However first class proteins—meat, fish, or eggs—should also be given daily for body building purposes.

Live on Bottom of Sea

For many years it was believed that no plant life could exist on the bottom of the sea because of the apparent absence of light. Scientists on the Atlantic found that ultraviolet rays penetrate the depths even where no visible light is evident. Certain forms of marine life, such as plankton and diatoms, thus are able to thrive at immense depths. The scientists also found that various creatures which resemble crabs and shrimps live on the bottom of the sea, feeding on organic ooses.

Judith Lane

Chapter 44

SURPRISE

IT WAS nearing lunch time. The juror with the walrus moustache chewed on a twisted end reflectively. One of the others tapped at his pocket where the bulge of a tobacco can showed.

The very sameness of her explanation seemed to reach the jury and Lampere realized it. He waited a moment, then said thoughtfully—"And of course a man with millions couldn't dine at a cook to prepare a[illegible]"

"No," retorted Judith quickly, "it's like corned beef and cabbage, you have to like it to cook it."

On the Rice roof, where she went with her party for lunch, Judith saw Mathile and Mrs. Bevins with Lampere. Again she was struck with the new beauty of the girl. She had doffed her grieving manner and was chatting with animation.

Judith was not recalled to the stand after the luncheon hour. Instead, Mathile, again drooping with grief, took her place, was sworn, and eyes lowered, handkerchief gripped in apparently tense fingers, awaited Lampere's questions.

When they came they were voiced in low, tender tones. "Miss Bevins, the previous witness told us that your father used to visit her pent-house to find food your servants were unable to prepare satisfactorily. I know this is going to be extremely painful to you, but can you throw a little light on this? Why was he forced to go there?"

"I'd rather not tell, please," said Mathile.

"For your mother's sake, Miss Bevins?"

She looked up, eyes limpid with tears. "Doctor Ainswright, whom we met on a cruise, made an examination of father, physically and mentally. He said if we wanted to keep him with us he must have no stimulants of any kind. For that reason we refused to give him tea, coffee and . . ."

"Yes, Miss Bevins, go on."

"Alcohol in any form."

"And did he go to Miss Lane's penthouse for tea and coffee?"

A low sob was the answer.

"Come now and brace up, those times when he returned at three and four in the morning, was he completely under the influence of liquor?"

Sobs, unrestrained, muffled with lace-frothed handkerchief were the answer, heard below Judge Morgan's furious objection—"Misleading, calling for the witness's deduction."

JUDITH stared at Mathile Bevins in horror. How dare she intimate a thing like that of Big Tom Bevins? Of her own part she thought nothing.

"How dare she talk like that of him?" she asked Mrs. Cunard piteously. "He rarely ever took a drink of anything, unless it were part of a dinner."

"She'll be paid for it," Mrs. Cunard said, with certainty.

The rest of the afternoon was spent in placing engineers on the stand, engineers who spoke in technical terms of the impracticability of the Rio Diablo Dam as it was being constructed.

The last witness was a man whom Judith dimly remembered having seen somewhere. He told how, in her eagerness to gain more money, Mrs. Dale had spent ten thousand dollars sinking a well in a dry spot where any geologist with an ounce of honesty in his heart would have sworn there was no oil.

He told of threatened strikes of the sober dam workers who resented the millionaire stenographer's high-handed methods.

"Gentlemen," said Lampere to the jury, "I regret I have not one more witness to present to you. Norman Dale, the husband of the young woman [illegible] there, the man who, if things were as worthy counsel would have us believe, would be at her side at a time like this."

"The plaintiff rests."

The thrust was a cruel one. Judith stiffened. If she had not already been numbed with pain, it might have hurt more cruelly, but now it seemed there wasn't much else could matter. She had lost, lost irrevocably.

Morgan and Cunard rode home with Mrs. Cunard and Judith, laughing and chatting. Judith thought them heartless, and once with a little hurt, "How can you," she brought their attention back to her.

"Well, you poor youngster," said the Judge kindly, "I'd plumb forgot you weren't accustomed to the ways of the courts."

"But we're not," wailed Judith.

"Oh, my word," gasped the Judge, "here you go little goddess in me! Don't you worry a mite. We're going to w[illegible]. And with a raising air which sat strangely on his dignity, "and look."

Judith kept beside Delphy and Mrs. Cunard joined forces and saw that she slept. When she awakened she found a quiet night, suspended from her chandelier, a frock. As Cila would have said, such a dress must be a frock.

Mrs. Cunard came in soon after. "Peggy Ainswright [illegible]," she said, after Judith had thanked her. "We want you to wear your five million dollars. You mustn't look crushed as Lampere would have you look. This is the beginning of your day."

Judith wondered if it were when she [illegible]. She was glad of the frock; somehow it gave her the assurance of still being clean, fragrant and fresh, not the soiled pers[illegible] whom Lampere had talked.

JUDGE MORGAN opened his case by putting a trio of medical men on the stand, three psychiatrists who testified that Tom Bevins had come to them on the day he drew up his new will, and asked for a thorough test.

"Why did he do this?" Morgan asked the first man.

"He said he felt there would be an attempt made to break his will, on the grounds of his being of unsound mind, and wished to prevent that."

"A senile psychosis," whispered Lampere in a stage whisper.

"No indeed," said the medical man, "he was ready with written proof to show us that his enemies were already at work. From the proof, Mr. Lampere," continued the doctor, "he was wise in his precaution. I judge you wish to go no further into this proof?"

"Of course," interposed Judge Morgan, "if Mr. Lampere wants to cross examine my witness before I have finished."

"I beg your pardon," came in surly tones.

The other two went unchallenged, nor did Lampere accept the privilege of cross-examination.

This completed, to Judith's amazement, Thomas Scoggins, senior, was introduced and told the true story of the oil well venture. Several dam workers appeared and said, that aside from outside interference, there had been no mutiny among the men and that Mrs. Dale had not attempted to "boss" them, but had said from the first she was merely acting as Big Tom Bevins' secretary, carrying out his instructions.

Max Larson also testified, and one of the women, who told of Judith's attempts to make life comfortable for the workers' families.

Judith was amazed, overwhelmed, as one after the other took the stand. Their appearance came as a complete surprise and her manner proved it.

A "brace" of engineers testified to the saneness of the dam's position and construction.

"You don't wish to cross examine?" inquired Morgan in mock surprise.

"No," laughed Lampere good-naturedly, "they are too well coached."

"I challenge that statement," barked Morgan, "I can prove I have not spoken to a single witness, nor has anyone connected with this side addressed them, on the subject of the trial."

Lampere did not ask for proof. He listened to Cila's spirited account of the "pent-house" with a crooked smile on his face, then as the hands of the clock began pointing to the closing hour, chewed thoughtfully on the end of pencil as though what w[illegible] on on the witness stand was of no value.

"And now," said Judge Morgan, "as my last witness I call Norman Dale, husband of Judith Dale, former partner of the firm of Dale, Lampere and Morrison."

That clarion went through the room like an electric charge. Reporters sprang from their seats and dashed to their telephones. Lampere sprang from his seat also, his face white and red and white by turn. Mathile's eyes widened and Judith—Judith quietly crumpled in her seat.

Someone brought water, and someone held her in strong arms. She looked up, it was Norman—"Judy can you ever forgive me?" he asked.

Tomorrow, Norman upsets the apple cart.

AGRIGRAPHS

Uncle Ab says it is not how much you talk, but what you say that counts.

Plant gladiolus when the trees that are native to your part of the country unfold their leaves. This will probably be sometimes between the fifteenth and the twenty-fourth of May.

Reports from county debt conciliation committees show that many heavily-mortgaged farm homes have been saved from foreclosure and satisfactory agreements reached between debtors and creditors.

Growers of dry beans in the United States intend to plant 1,945,-[illegible] acres this year, compared to 1,-471,000 acres harvested in 1932. The estimated acreage for 1934 is about one-sixth larger than last year.

Potato fields should be plowed before May 10 to avoid new attacks of wireworms. Early plowing also helps to conserve moisture.

Ability to rear a thrifty flock of chickens is the best test of a successful poultryman. Write to the New York state college of agriculture for a new bulletin on how to rear chickens. Ask for E-153.

Approximately $1,100,000,000 was loaned by the farm credit administration to farmers from May 1, 1933 through April 15, 1934. Of this amount, more than $640,000,000 was disbursed by federal land banks.

SALE POSITIVELY ENDS APRIL 28

Fashions by Eleanor Gunn

Matched to Type, If Not To Color

New York—Once spring comes and the smell of the turf gets into our nostrils, we begin to be keen on making the jumps into sports clothes this season's entries, an unusually large field, seems to leave no doubt that corsy ones are the favorites.

Checks in winning colors, plaids, all sorts of Tattersall effects, [illegible] and so on promise to [illegible] each other.

For top coat tartan shoulders and [illegible] is abroad in the land, topped by smartly tweed hats, or not more matching but smaller and more casual ones. Knitted suits with sweaters or blouses are also out again. Dressy gloves are pulled over bare arms. Perforated shoes seem to be chosen in matching shades [illegible] and with blue suits and so on.

The coat sketched is one of the season's successes. It's provocative because of its simplicity. Speaking generally, simplicity is not the keynote of the season, but because it is new, it is unusually effective.

Coats of more or less the length of the one shown may be listed as among a girl's best friends. It is not difficult to select a coat which seems to belong to any of several costumes. It's a separate coat but it isn't, if you know what I mean. This idea follows through most accessories too, not excepting hats which rarely match in a literal sense but are after all perfectly matched to type.

Scotland's Plaids

New York—Plaids, richly colored ones in big dimensions, are being worn by a number of the smartest women these spring days. Swagger suits with plaid coats and plain skirts or all-plaid are the most popular plaid costumes, since they give the wide sweep of fabric which makes the most appropriate interpretation of plaid costumes.

Red with beige or gray tones for contrast is a favorite scheme. A sheer linen weave in woolen was seen used for the gay blue and green plaid skirt accompanying a beige tweed suit. District checks and plaids continue to be sponsored by some of the smartest women wearing country clothes for shopping in town. Glens, Guardsmen, Glenfeshie and Shooting are some of the classics chosen for topcoats.

A NAVY CHECK-UP

A sports ensemble from Worth consists of a three-quarter length coat in heavy navy and white crown foot woolen. The pads at the sleeves and neckline are made of strips of blue and white pique. The skirt is navy woolen worn with a blouse of white pique.

For Frothy and Frivolous Frocks

Illustrated are a number of novelty arrangements with the dominance of high necklines a conspicuous feature.

Pleats, frills and ripplet jabots are all in the spring picture, and the fabrics are aids in creating the crisp line—taffeta, organdie, linen, mousseline de soie and picue all being selected for this purpose. Many frocks introduce wide collars that have a youthful air and give a wide look to the shoulders.

"Four Bottles Helped Me"

Feels Fine . . . Never Tired

"My four children were born close together. I lived on a farm with lots of work to do and I got all rundown so I could hardly go. Four bottles of your Vegetable Compound helped me wonderfully. Twice since then I had to take several bottles to regulate and strengthen me. I take care of my house and children, do all my laundry and do home work for a garment factory, and I feel fine and never get tired. I have also used the Sanative Wash and it relieved my trouble."—Mrs. Chas. T. Pfitzinger, 55 Conklin Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

All ships which sail the seas carry certificates of identity and, where passengers are carried. British vessels are subject to regulations for safety and fitness. The highest class of excellence in which a vessel can be placed is +100A.1+LMC, which is generally known as "A1 at Lloyds." The star or cross shows that a special survey was made during the building of the ship, and 100A means that all the rules laid down were obeyed, the figure 1 referring to the efficiency of the anchors and cables. In addition, the letters LMC denote that a special certificate has been issued for the machinery, which with a star in front again refers to a special survey during construction.

Seeing The World

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"It was all my fault," continued Honey Bear, as tears rolled down her cheeks and fell on her furry chest. "I shouldn't have left them for a moment. Do you suppose the circus people could have taken them? They would be able to do tricks in a little while or they would be so sweet just for people to come and look at."

At this the right Honey Bear began to sob.

"Oh, oh, oh me!" shouted Willy Nilly. "Those circus people were as nice as they could be. You mustn't say such things, Honey Bear. You only came out just before they left to see them, of course, and you didn't know how fine they were."

"But the cubs may have heard the excitement, and followed the circus after we were on our way back from seeing them off," Honey Bear said between sobs.

Willy Nilly had thought of that possibility, but Christopher Columbus Crow spoke up at once.

"No," he cawed, "they couldn't have done that or I would have seen them. You know I was flying overhead and watching the circus people as they started on their journey."

"But they're missing. We don't know where they are," Honey Bear

continued. "Oh dear, oh dear. Some harm must have come to them. I cannot stand it." And she crumpled up in a great heap and sobbed and sobbed.

Tears were rolling down Willy Nilly's cheeks, Jelly Bear was the saddest looking bear in the world, and the others were trying to brush away tears when suddenly, coming toward Willy Nilly's, they saw the two cubs! They were out seeing the world.

Choristers Have Completed Program

All arrangements are now complete for the concert to be given by the Kingston Choristers of the Y. W. C. A. on Monday evening, April 30, at the high school auditorium. Harry P. Dodge is conductor of the club which was organized in January and is now presenting its first concert.

Carroll Ault, baritone, will be the assisting artist and he will be accompanied by Charles Gilbert Spross. Mr. Ault has appeared in opera for four seasons in France and Italy, and in this country with the Philadelphia Grand Opera Company as well as on many concert programs. The accompaniments by Mr. Spross will add much to the enjoyment of the concert.

The Kingston Choristers has 65 members, among whom are many of the city's soloists and musicians. They have prepared an interesting program including an arrangement "Spring Cycle" with incidental solo by Mrs. Clarence Wolfersteig and selections by Sir Edward Elgar, Deems-Taylor, Saint-Saens, Lemare, and Pearl Curran. The closing number will be Schubert's "The Almighty" with the soprano solo by Mrs. Josephine Mertel Dederick of Saugerties.

WASHINGTON HEADLINERS

No. 14—Borah, "The Lion of Idaho," Still Plays a Lone Hand

This is the fourteenth in a series of articles on the personalities behind the "big names" in Washington.

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE

Washington (AP)—Borah of Idaho still rides alone.

The dean of the senate—he has worn the toga continuously for 27 years—remains the arch-individualist, the lone lion of politics, bowing neither to President nor party, and sometimes not even to the popular will, in taking his stand on governmental matters.

"New dealers" have stolen much of the show from William E. Borah and other old stars in the political circus, but when the "Lion of Idaho" roars, it is still rated a center-ring performance.

Borah has long been a thorn in the flesh of Republican potentates and organization loyalists, a party rebel but never a bolter. He has been assailed often by Republicans as a "stubborn obstructionist," yet his recent criticism of "new deal" phases such as crop reduction and NRA's effect on small businesses brought commendation from conservatives who formerly denounced him.

Liked 'Bill' Hart

But he still rides alone—bearing the Republican label but teaming permanently with no organization, not even the independent Republican bloc.

Borah is a lone figure in social life, too. He is no tea or dinner devotee, rarely is seen at a social function and although he has many friends there is probably none who could be called a crony or chum of his. He spends his evenings buried in biographies, histories and other "heavy" books in the large library of his modest apartment on Connecticut avenue.

One maid suffices for the Borah establishment. Mrs. Borah enjoys contract bridge; the senator cares nothing for it. He goes to the movies occasionally, and Two-Gun Bill Hart was his favorite screen actor, probably because Hart reconstructed to his taste the days when Borah knew "the wild west."

He loves the outdoors but is no sports fan. Of the solitary variety also are his horseback rides and his walks. He often takes a walk in the rain, hatless, his helmet of now grayish-brown hair and "the mastiff jaw" identifying him to those who see him.

No Baby-Kisser

Strikingly Borahesque has been his almost complete disregard for orthodox campaigning. He never has been a good back slapper, baby kisser or post office peddler.

Most Idaho folks apparently have figured he didn't have time to bother with such things as getting bridges or power sites for his state. He had to be free, they said, to do "heavy thinking" on the League of Nations, disarmament, war debts and other big matters.

There is a story told to illustrate this sentiment. A farm boy who had visited in Boise returned home to tell his father with considerable pride that Senator Borah had been pointed out to him walking down the street and looking in store windows just as ordinary people do.

The father, snorting skeptically, said:

"Son, those city people were giving you a big yarn. What the hell do you think a man like Borah would be doing in Idaho.

Fan And Pan Mail

Some political observers have said the senator reached his zenith in prestige a few years ago, that his star has been fading. But he still is rated the best orator in the senate and few are his equals in fast give-and-take argumentation. In debate he combined pugnacity, politeness and logical thought easily expressed.

It is believed he holds the all-time capitol hill record for receipt of "fan and pan" mail. To charges that he has been inconsistent and disloyal to his party, he has replied:

"I follow issues, not men. My record shows no inconsistency of principle."

There was a talk a year ago when he was in poor health that his political career was drawing to a close. But friends say he has made an amazing recovery since a major operation a few months ago and he, himself, says he feels as he did 15 years ago. Much of his recuperative power has been attributed to abstemious living. He neither drinks alcoholic beverages nor smokes; he even refuses coffee.

On June 29 he will be 69 years old. The years in the political arena have left ther mark on him, but Borah of Idaho still rides strongly, and alone.

Next—Senator Couzens of Michigan.

NO WONDER
the customers go right by

NO ONE is in a buying mood when little rivers of perspiration are running down his back.

A number of businesses have learned that lesson, to their profit.

Air conditioned movie theatres find that the hotter the weather, the more people flock to them.

The same thing is true of air conditioned hotels, restaurants, shops and department stores.

If you are a customer, your comfort demands that you seek out places of business that are air conditioned. If you are in business, your profits can be increased by air conditioning.

General Electric gives you the benefit of its years of experience in refrigeration, electrical control engineering and automatic heating.

This company offers the most complete line of air conditioning equipment—well designed, dependable, made to meet a wide variety of needs. You can have complete, year-round air conditioning for one room or an entire store, office, restaurant, home. (Complete air conditioning supplies clean air, gently circulated, always at the right temperature with humidity raised or lowered as needed.)

You can have summer cooling, by which the air is cleaned, cooled, dehumidified, and gently circulated. Or you can have winter air conditioning alone. Installations are made under direction of G-E trained engineers.

We are the G-E Air Conditioning dealers in this territory. For complete information, stop in, write or phone.

It's getting so now that you can buy farm land for $5 an acre, and then collect $10 from the government for not using it.

Doctor (to film actress)—You are run down and need a change.

Film Actress—A change? Do you know that during the last 15 months I've had three husbands, four cars, three jewel robberies, 11 cooks, two divorces, three publicity agents, seven maids and eight landlords? What other changes can you suggest?

Mother—I do not. He looks too much like your father when he was a young man.

The older children nearly always feel that younger ones get the best of it. In most families the chances are they are more or less right.

The present trend in journalism is toward a columnist for every column.

REARING CHICKENS.

Someone has said that no song can compare with the early morning chorus of a flock of chickens and the long, lusty crow of an arrogant rooster. Strong, healthy chicks always speak for themselves and produce well for their owners.

A Cornell bulletin gives facts on rearing chickens. It tells what to feed them, how to protect them from disease and natural enemies, what brooding equipment is needed, along with many other profitable suggestions. It is in demand now.

Old Timer Finds a Parade He Likes

"Driving out the Plank Road t'other evening," quoth the Old Timer to his friend, the corner druggist, "I noticed that the big willows by the Gun Club's range are all leafing out, and that's my favorite sign that spring is sure enough here."

"Yes, sir," replied the druggist, "it has arrived, and that reminds me that the season for parades is again upon us. Now, if there is anything that I admire to gaze upon, excepting one, it is a good snappy parade with plenty of music. But, alas! It will be Decoration Day at least before we get to see a parade."

"Not so, my friend; not so. It will be but Friday night at the latest—and a parade of beauteous females at that," came back the Old Timer. "Now there, down at the Municipal Auditorium, as they choose to call it, will be my idea of an interesting parade. Think of seeing, all in one night, the dresses and appearances as worn by women folks since Civil War times, together with a vast amount of other habiliments, curious handed down through the generations! What a stir and bustle (Ha, my own pun) There'll be when this fashion parade of the decades gets under way at the old armory!"

"Yes, I've read all about it and the preview sounds good," said the druggist. "Friday's my lodge night but, nevertheless and whatever, I just can't miss this ocular feast of old feminine modes. Gay deceivers they undoubtedly were, those girls of other days, and many and varied were the artificial lures which they employed; yet the gentle souls were none the less charming for all that. I'll meet you here at eight p. m. and We'll stroll down to the auditorium together."

Old Timer: "It's a go!"

Can't Break in Jail, but Is Fed Anyway

New Bedford, Mass. — Victor Demoranville, perhaps the most disgusted man in the world, was jobless, hungry, cold and homeless, so he decided the only way out of it all was to get into jail somehow.

He picked up a brick and threw it at a large store window, but to his amazement the brick broke and not the window. Ingenuously Demoranville told the proprietor, but the owner said that he would not do anything about it.

Finally he went to the police station, however, he was still jobless, cold, homeless, but not hungry. A policeman took him to lunch and then sent him on his way.

CHINESE LAD ENDS HIKE AROUND WORLD

Meets With Exciting Adventures in Far East.

Washington.—One hot day in June, 1930, a twenty-five-year-old Chinese youth left his father's house in Shanghai for a walk. Three years and seven months later he arrived at Washington.

For a year and a half Poon Tuck Ming wandered through the regions of French Indo-China, Siam, the Malay peninsula, Persia, Syria, Palestine, and Egypt—13,000 miles.

The intense heat of the Asiatic desert sun forced him to travel only at night to conserve his water supply. Arabs waylaid him on his last night in the desert and robbed him of all belongings except a highly prized album which Poon pleaded to be allowed to keep. The album is filled with official stamps, snapshots and autographs.

In India, Poon chatted with Gandhi and was presented with a piece of cloth woven by the mahatma himself. A quaint belief of the Brahmans and the Hindus nearly ended his jaunt prematurely. The natives saw no reason why a disbeliever should eat. They relented, however, and also presented him with a brass gong with which to protect himself against wild beasts.

On to Egypt went Poon Tuck Ming, and thence to Greece by boat. From Greece, Poon began the big push—a steady march through 14 scattered countries.

Turkey, Bulgaria, Rumania, Hungary, Austria, Switzerland, France, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, and England were visited in that order by the youthful adventurer.

Sailing from Liverpool, he crossed the ocean and arrived safely in New York, completing the last stage of his journey. Just for a "breather," he walked to Washington, stopping long enough to rest up as a week-end guest of the Chinese ambassador before heading for California.

Spirits Guide an Aged Hand in Art Designs

Eshbach, Pa.—A new form of "hex spirits" are working in Berks county, it appears, with reports that Mrs. Elizabeth Spitler, seventy-one, is producing amazing, colorful designs through the guidance of "spirits."

Stranger than the fact that "spirits" move her hand and form the fantastic designs is the knowledge that she never has had any artistic training.

Fifteen years ago she became a spiritualist.

"Shortly after that," she said, "I was sitting alone in the kitchen. My head started to buzz, I could feel, around me in the air, things brushing my head. They were spirits, good and bad, fighting for the upper hand.

"Something told me to take up a pencil. I drew a curved line. Then my hand froze to the paper. I don't know how long I sat there. When the folks came home I had the design done."

Since then the aged woman has drawn many other designs, some large and some small, and all at the direction of the "spirit," she said.

Sandpapered Knees Aid Insurance Tricksters

Cleveland, Ohio.—How it feels to have your shins and knees sandpapered until the skin comes off, was told in common pleas court here by Julia Melaraeno, who said she underwent that torture to help a gang of tricksters swindle insurance companies.

Appearing against one man, who was indicted with two others in a series of insurance claims on fake automobile accidents, she testified the sandpaper was applied to her legs to make her story of an accident appear plausible.

Sewing Machine Bobbin Caused "Pain in Side"

Lockport, N. Y.—Not until three-year-old George Fussell had a bad pain in the side did he get up enough courage to tell his mother "I swallowed something from the sewing machine."

The "something" turned out to be a sewing machine bobbin, after an X-ray examination. No ill effects were suffered and doctors decided to take X-rays again in the near future to determine the course of events.

Today

Kingston: "Wonder Bar." Extravagant settings, grand music, a stage full of pretty girls, some swell dance numbers plus Al Jolson, Dolores Del Rio, Ricardo Cortez, Kay Francis, Dick Powell, Hugh Herbert, Hal Kemp, Hal LeRoy and Guy Kibbee combine to make this one of the bigger and better musical comedy offerings now being shown. The action centers at the Wonder Bar in Paris, with Al Jolson the head man. He is in love with a dancer in his show, and this same dancer is in love with a gigolo. Before the romance is straightened out, there is a stabbing, a planned elopement, and when it is all over, Mr. Jolson still fails to win the girl he adores. The plot, however, is the smallest part of the show. It's the beautifully staged dances, the choruses, the songs, the gayety and comedy that has been woven into the action. And of course there is only one Al Jolson with his mannerisms and his own peculiar style of getting his songs over to his audience. Although the cast is filled with big names, all of them, with the exception of Jolson, seem to be more or less in roles which give them small opportunity to display their dramatic talent.

Orpheum: "Carolina." A story of the old south, with all of its charm and hospitality and gentle romance. What with excellent direction and a group of actors of recognized dramatic skill, this fable radiates reality and interest. Janet Gaynor, in the role of the little northern girl who wins the heart of a wealthy, titled southerner over the opposition of his family and tradition, turns in another appealing performance. Lionel Barrymore just about steals the show with his usual flawless acting, and Robert Young, Mona Barrie, Richard Cromwell, Henrietta Crossman and Stepin Fetchit are featured in the cast. The scenery is beautiful, the costumes and settings authentic and the story moves along in an interesting manner throughout.

Broadway: "N. T. G.'s Paradise Club Revue" on the stage, and "Lazy River" on the screen. The famous New York city night club revue of N. T. G. is the main attraction at the Broadway, bringing a stage presentation which offers comedy, dancing and songs in entertaining variety. Ted Clair heads the cast as master of ceremonies and in the supporting cast are the Sherr Brothers, Charles Arnold, Eddie Boland, Joan Ware, Burnes and Swanson, Marion McNeece and Ridge and a well trained and attractive chorus. "Lazy River" is a melodrama of the south, with Robert Young, Jean Parker, Ted Healy and Nat Pendleton in the featured roles. Robert Young goes to Louisiana for the purpose of swindling an old lady out of her property, but he ends up by playing the hero. Excellent photography and scenery add greatly to the enjoyment of this film, and the capable work of the cast makes the show enjoyable screen fare. Ted Healy and Nat Pendleton come through with some swell comedy during the run of the picture.

Tomorrow

Kingston: "Looking for Trouble." Laughs come with increasing fervor in this madcap melodrama with Spencer Tracy and Jack Oakie co-starred as a comedy duo for the first time. The boys are a couple of trouble shooters for a telephone company, and their work is just one long series of exciting events. They get into numerous added difficulties because they go into business not of their concern. A vein of lusty comedy runs through the whole show, and a bit of romance is added too. Fast moving entertainment.

Orpheum: Same.

Broadway: "Two Alone" and "Race Track." Jean Parker, Tom Brown and Zasu Pitts are the main characters in the first feature, an idealistic little tale of young love and how it triumphs over all. This show is well acted and has the charm of youth and innocence about it. It is the story of a girl, terror stricken by a cruel old guardian, and how she and the boy she loves, fight against him for their happiness. "Race Track" is another story of horses, betting, and the atmosphere of the race track. Leo Carillo heads the cast.

Catskill Glee Club Concert

The Catskill Glee Club (Rolland F. Heermance, director), accompanied by Miss Mary Johnson, and assisted by Lilion Hamer Atkinson, soprano, and Mrs. Edith Hubbard, pianist, entertained a large audience at the Wurts Street Baptist Church on Monday evening.

The club had prepared an interesting program, varied in character. This musical organization has won a fine reputation for its clear-cut enunciation. This adds very materially to the enjoyment of their programs. Their a capella singing is excellent, too. All of their songs were heartily applauded and some of them were repeated as encore numbers.

The Rev. Mr. Brown, pastor of the Wurts Street Baptist Church and a member of the club, acted as master of ceremonies, making several announcements and introducing the club members, individually to the audience, which all appreciated.

It was a matter of sincere regret to all that owing to an attack of laryngitis, Mr. Heermance was unable to give the solo numbers which the program announced he would give.

But the disappointment was mitigated and later turned into very real delight when it was announced that Mrs. Edith Hubbard of Catskill would give a group of piano solos. Mrs. Hubbard, a charming little lady of snow-white hair, lovingly known as "Mother Hubbard" to countless "shut-ins" to whom she she goes, in many cities and for whom she plays, is indeed a fine musician, bringing from her loved instrument a beautiful, full singing tone. Her interpretation and technique were those of an artist, too.

Lilion Hamer Atkinson, soprano, who has a voice of wide range, has been the soloist for the Catskill Glee Club on previous occasions here, and was given a hearty welcome on Monday evening. She was obliged to give encore numbers to both of her groups of songs.

The club sang four groups of songs. They were: "Swing Along" by Cook, "To an Old Woman" by Roberton and "Chimes of Spring" by Lincke for the first group. Again they sang, "Wiegenlied" (in German) by Brahms and Dvorak's "Goin' Home." The third group included "The Bell-Man" by Forsythe, "The Old Road," by Scott, and "Why Don't You Try" by Pietro Yon. The club concluded the program by singing "Laudamus" by Protheroe, "Steal Away" by Manney and "150th Psalm," by Franck.

Miss Atkinson's songs were "The Little Damozel," by Novello, and "The Fairy Pipers" by Brewer. Again she sang, "Carissima" by Penn and "Ecstacy" by Rogers, giving Spross's "Will O' the Wisp" as an encore.

"Mother Hubbard's" first selection was a lovely old melody, with variations, which Mrs. Hubbard said she had found in a portfolio of music which had belonged to her mother. Its title was "The Last Mile". Again she played that all too seldom heard "Duetto" by Mendelssohn and for an encore number a delightful selection entitled "Rustles of Spring."

Mr. Brown in his happy introduction of the club members, first presented President Fiester, then Conductor Heermance, who had not faced the audience before, Miss Johnson, their splendid accompanist, and Richard C. Kennedy, the business manager.—Clara Norton Reed.

"Hansel and Gretel" Will Appear Twice

THE WITCH, MARION SELEE

It has been found necessary to give two performances of the opera, "Hansel and Gretel" which the Kingston Federated Council of P-T A.'s are sponsoring. On Thursday at 3:15 p. m., a performance will be given for high school students and any adults who wish to attend. On Friday at 2:45 p. m., a performance will be given for the grammar school pupils and patrons.

Cecile Sherman, who plays the part of Gretel, is a native of Mobile, Ala. Miss Sherman was awarded a scholarship at Boston Conservatory. She was for two seasons a soloist with the Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra and for four seasons, leading soprano of the American Opera Company. She also was a member of the New York Opera Comique and has appeared many times "on the air" and in national concert tours. She has a voice of remarkable volume for one so petite and her rare gift of personality makes her the center of every situation on the stage.

Marion Selee likes the part of the witch in Hansel and Gretel the best of the many operatic roles she has sung. She willingly disguises her lovely appearance with the false nose, blackened teeth and other ugly features of the witch. However, she also takes the part of the mother where she does not require so ugly a disguise.

While Miss Selee has appeared in musical festivals in Worcester, Mass., aand public recitals and concerts in New York and Boston, she is primarily interested in opera and has sung leading roles with the American Opera Company, the French-Italian Opera Company, New York Opera Comique, Atlantic City Steel Pier Company, and has toured for the last 15 weeks with the San Carlo Opera Company.

Louise Bernhardt, who sings the part of Hansel, was born in Melrose, Mass., and received her musical education in this country. In 1930, she won the Naumberg prize and in the 1931 contests of the National Federation of Music Clubs she won first place for contralto. She has made two coast to coast concert tours, made one motion picture, and has won considerable praise for her radio work. She was a recent member of the Chicago Civil Opera and sung solos as guest artist with the San Carlo Opera Company.

Delaware Highway Head Aids Loughran

land was such that he believed the water would swirl back toward the bridge and do damage if the stream was not kept within its banks as had been intended by the work done and the embankments.

Charles W. Boughton, civil engineer and inspector on County Bridge No. 15 at Napanoch was called. He had been in the employ of New York city on the Schoharie water job. On February 2, 1934, he became inspector on the bridge under Mr. Loughran. Prior to that he was in charge of the CWA project of making a survey of the county highways. He said he asked for a job and Mr. Loughran gave him one. At no time had anything been said about political affiliations. The witness said he was and always had been a Democrat and never voted anything but a Democratic ticket so far as he knew.

Cross-examined he said about a week ago Mr. Loughran was informed personally that he was a Democrat. He was asked about the temporary bridge at Napanoch which had been closed for a matter of 26 hours by the county superintendent following flood damage. He said he had passed no opinion on the safety of the bridge. He reported to work and saw conditions and notified Mr. Loughran's office and some one came out and closed the bridge. He said he knew nohting of Mr. Loughran telling anyone that the town of Warwarsing would have to maintain two watchmen at the temporary bridge while it was being used. The bridge was closed for 30 hours, repairs were made and the bridge was opened and no watchmen were there now.

Van Buren a Democrat

Alfred Van Buren of Stone Ridge called. He is employed as laborer under Mr. Loughran on highways. He said his father had held a position under President Wilson in the prohibition depratment as attorney and that his grandfather had always been a Democrat. He himself was a Democrat. For three years he had worked under Mr. Loughran and never had he been approached or heard anything said about political affiliations.

Cross examined he said he was not actively engaged in politics. He said he took people to the polls on election.

"You supported Fred Davis for supervisor of Marbletown?" asked Ewig. "I did," replied the witness. He said he knew Mr. Davis was a Republican. Two years before when he lived in the town of Ulster he said he supported Pratt Boice for supervisor because he thought he too was the man for the job.

"And you are a good Democrat?" asked Mr. Ewig.

"I am" replied the witness. He said he had lived in one of Mr. Davis's houses and knew him well. He said he scarcely knew Pratt Boice and doubted if Mr. Boice knew him. He could not recall Mr. Boice's opponent's name.

"I voted for Mr. Davis because I thought he was the man for the job," replied the witness.

Asked if he supported Mr. Davis because of his job on the highways he said no. He never talked politics to Mr. Davis and did not believe that his job on the roads was due to his support of Mr. Davis. He said he had not been subpoenaed but had been asked to come in today by Mr. Baldmin.

No Politics

Charles Strobel of Sawkill said his father had been a Democrat so far as he knew and he too was a Democrat. For two years he had been employed by the county as a shovel helper and laborer. During that time nothing had been said to him about politics by Mr. Loughran.

Cross examined Strobel said he had not spoken of the case as he did now know he was to come until someone called him on the phone.

"Did you support Mr. Charlton for supervisor last fall in the town of Kingston?" asked Ewig.

"I refuse to answer who I supported. It is no one's business who I supported," replied the witness. He said he was not active in politics last fall in his town. He said he was enrolled as a Democrat but refused to say whether he had ever voted a straight Democratic ticket or not. He was asked if he knew the principles of the Democratic party.

Mr. Flemming interrupted and said perhaps Mr. Ewig would define the principles of the Democratic party if they had any. This brought a laugh from the board.

Strobel said he had not enrolled last fall. Mr. Charlton did not ask him to vote for him. In the town everyone talked politics about election time.

Allen Scribner of West Hurley came next. He is a mechanic in the county garage. Employed three years. Mr. Loughran employed him and never said anything about political affiliations. At present he said he was a Republican. There was no cross-examination.

John Gibbons of High Falls came next. He too is employed in the county garage. Worked four years. Nothing had ever been said to him about political affiliations. No cross-examination. He said he was a Republican now.

Burger Testifies.

William Burger of Kingston, truck driver for the county was called as the last witness of the morning session. He has been driving a truck since 1931. He never talked about party affiliations and Mr. Loughran never mentioned it.

"Did you have a talk about your truck with Mr. Loughran once?" asked Mr. Flemming.

"O, yes" replied the witness, "I had a picture of Herbie Myers on my truck and he asked me to take it off as it did not look good."

That was the yes: Herbert Myers was running for Republican supervisor in the Third ward of the city.

Mr. Ewig asked the witness if it had not been through Mr. Myers that he got his job and the witness said, "partly."

He said that for the good turn which Mr. Myers had done for him he supported Myers at election.

Paradise Revue Is Big Hit at Broadway

The N. T. G. Paradise Revue, playing at the Broadway Theatre, yesterday made a hit with the audiences that attended the three shows and generously applauded the quick moving presentation that was done in eight scenes which were short and snappy, as were the costumes worn by the bevy of beautiful blondes and brunettes who account for the box office attraction.

Of course there are talented stars in the show, who do more than count on their figure to put them over. Ted Claire, chief song and dance man; the Sherr brothers, dance team; Mulroy, McNeiss and Ridge, roller skaters, and last but not least, the funny Cliff Crane, who packs all the comedy in the revue.

Crane imitates Sammy Cohen, formerly with the show, and does it so perfectly that one could hardly tell the difference between the movie star and his understudy, who, besides walking, talking, dancing and acting in general like Sammy, resembles him physically to a great degree.

Getting back to the ladies, they too have talent to offer besides exhibitions in pulchritude. Joan Mona, Russian ballerina, in her number, "Sophisticated Lady", danced to the delight of the patrons, and beautiful blonde Miriam Bradford did an acrobatic dance with a difficult routine. Little Mickey Moran with her tap dance was another hit of the show, as was Byrnes and Swanson in the "Carioca". Miss Swanson is a sister of Gloria, the moving picture star, and shows a striking resemblance to her.

That novelty was the chief idea in planning the N. T. G. revue was manifested by the snowball fight between the members of the cast and the audience, who hurled cotton "snowballs" back and forth as the Broadway theatre orchestra played a special arrangement at the opening.

Another part of the show in which the audience took a hand was the portion featuring the roller skating trio. Two boys from the audience answered a call for assistance on the stage and were whirled around so that they were unable to take their seats without assistance, being dizzy from the experience. After the two youngsters tried the experience, a young lady went up on the stage to get a taste of the dizziness and as N. T. G. himself would say, "bit off more than she could chew."

Stage manager for the show is Joe Tinsley, a veteran in the theatrical line, who does about everything but dance in the chorus. In fact he is so active back-stage that Ray Adams, Mike Ross and Lou Short, stage men at the Broadway, claim he is the whole show without going out to perform. Tinsley is the man who imitates the characteristic "ahs" for which N. T. G. is famous, furnishing them from the wings as the beautiful ladies enter the stage to show how well one can look wearing so little.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

By The Associated Press

Saved: 200 Coppers

Troy, N. Y., April 24—Police Justice Byrne "wouldn't rob a child's bank even for the law."

So he told Everett Lawless, whom he fined $2 on a traffic charge.

Lawless dug down and brought out $2 in pennies.

"What's the idea," asked Judge Byrne.

"I've been out of work for some time," Lawless replied, "and had to take these from the kid's bank."

"Take it back," ordered the court. "I wouldn't rob a child's bank even for the law. Put it back in your child's bank."

What Do They Mean?

Hamilton, Ont.—M. Funger, police court interpreter who speaks 13 or 14 languages and several dialects, underwent an English examination by defense counsel in court, and failed to pass with honors.

He said he didn't know the meanings of the words ambiguity, obliterate and opaque.

Fame Is Fleeting

Pittsburgh—His job gone, Tom Hunt, 35, visited the family relief headquarters and applied for aid. Then he returned home to his wife and four children. There was an official-looking letter waiting from Washington. It said:

"I take great pleasure in informing you  you have been awarded the Distinguished Service Cross in recognition for your extraordinary heroism in action near Cote-De-Chatillion, France, October 14, 1918.

Still Trying

Winnipeg—Jacob Goody, who was born 107 years ago in Russia, hopes to become a British citizen before he dies.

He has renewed the application he made two years ago for naturalization.

His previous application was rejected because of insufficient knowledge of the English language.

On Chew Street, Too

Allentown, Pa.—The Lehigh county court agreed that Mrs. Gertrude E. Wells, of Allentown, should have a divorce from William Wells, of Niagara Falls, N. Y. Mrs. Wells, who lives on Chew street, testified that her husband washed his false teeth at the dinner table while guests were present and picked drops of cream from the rim of the pitcher.

Pigs vs. Children

Oklahoma City—Civilization, in the opinion of Prof. W. H. Hill of Oklahoma City University, has done a lot for pigs but mighty little for boys.

"We've devoted time and money to improving our cattle and hogs, observing inherent characteristics and improving the breed but during the same time we haven't progressed one iota in improving our children," he said in a public address.

Tips on CONTRACT

By TOM O'NEIL

Cashing A Fit

Great is the slam potentially of a powerful two-suited hand. Once the lucky holder finds which of his suits has the more support from partner, he can proceed toward the heights with confidence.

Some players do not make original bids of two of a suit with more than two losing tricks if the suit is a minor or more than three losing tricks if the suit is a major.

Another school will make open bids of two freely with hands containing about five high card tricks or less if the suits have length and strength without regard to the proportion of possible losers and the number of tricks necessary for game or slam. These bids work out usually when a fit is found and one hand is primary control in the big suit of three suits and secondary control of the other.

For instance a hand played by Norris A. Huse of New York:

(DEALER) NORTH
♥AKJ53
♦AKJ764
♣A

WEST	EAST
♠KQJ	♠A1086
♥107	♥9
♦Q1082	♦953
♣QJ42	♣K1096

SOUTH
♠9753
♥Q8642
♦NONE
♣8753

The North hand, held by 3rd. does not come up to the standards; an opening bid of two diamonds with the school which considers losers alone. It has a spade loser, possibly two or more losers each in hearts and diamonds. But Buttenschied that all he needed was whether his partner had aces; Valley for diamonds or hearts. Adjourned.

With the enemy passing, Dar. opening two diamond bid, Verse South bid two no trump to award lack of quick tricks. North three hearts and South showed a distinct preference by bidding five hearts. North thereupon contracted for a little slam in hearts and West made a misguided double on the possibilities of a spade, diamond and club trick. North redoubled.

A spade was opened and one trick in that suit was the only trick taken by the defense. There were ample trumps South to permit the diamond suit to be set up by ruffing, notwithstanding West's possession of four to the queen.

There never was a time than NOW to plan for Automatic Heating with Gas

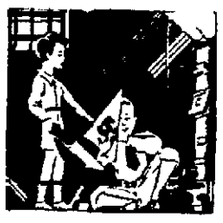
our time when it comes to heating changes. The way to t wisely is to give thought to it in the spring, rather than fall when winter is crowding you.

der these facts about gas heating:

Rates for heating homes with gas are lower now than they have ever been before. They will not be higher in fall. Therefore, you may know what your fuel costs will be.

A complete heating survey of your home may now be made and the result submitted to you for careful and deliberate study. You may decide at your leisure, with all the facts in front of you.

In proving the heating qualities of the home itself can best be done in warm weather. Such heat installations as you may wish to add for the economical and efficient heating of your home can best be installed in summer, and installations will result in cooler rooms in hot weather as well as greater economy in fuel costs.



Installation is simpler in the "off season." The simple units needed for automatic heating with gas may be added at any time to any good furnace, but a careful leisurely installation can best be made outside the heating season. Installation costs may be handled the same whether the installation is made now or during the rough season.

Select Group to Study With Dumm

A select group of recent Kingston High School graduates formed a chapter, is now organizing to participate in a brief, intensive program of university grade bookkeeping, accounting and office management procedure. The chief purpose of this specialized training is to prepare ambitious students, in a minimum time by proved methods for worthwhile positions in the field of accounting and office management.

Clarence L. Dumm, high school principal, teacher of the group in the capacity of group leader. He will take charge of the regular round table discussions, the first of which will convene at the high school May 1, at 7:30 in the evening.

The instruction is provided by La Salle Extension University of Chicago, world's largest business training university. Practice in actual business problems is embodied in the "home study" plan of progress. Instruction is individual. The periodic meetings under Mr. Dumm's supervision are group discussions of work accomplished and measures of progress of each member.

Membership in the group is limited. Those registering now will be granted membership in the eighteen months' program, which if continued leads up to the degree of certified public accountant (C. P. A.).

A few of the students who have enrolled are Miss Anne L. Jaeger, Miss Dorothea Brophy, Adolph Rodtiels, Herman Lurie, Willard Berryman, Arthur Rifenbary and Dwight McEntee.

Ice Out Of Saranac Means Spring is Here

Saranac Lake, N. Y., April 24 (AP)—Winter's ice has gone out of the lower Saranac Lake, the Adirondack Mountain region's sign that spring is here.

The last of the ice in the lower Saranac disappeared today. There still is ice in Crescent and Ampersand Bays but it is fast melting.

Last year the ice went out of Saranac Lake on April 20.

May Queen Chosen At the High School

Monday morning at a meeting of the senior class at Kingston High School, Miss Janet Goodsell, daughter of Mrs. S. Goodsell, of 31 Green street, was chosen May Queen, and will preside over her court at the annual festivities early next month.

Financial and Commercial

New York, April 24 (AP)—Stocks generally displayed resistance to sagging prices today but only scattered specialties were able to ignore the declining commodity trends.

Wheat got down about a cent a bushel and the other cereals eased. Silver futures and the bar metal dropped around 1 cent or more an ounce despite the Senate silver bloc's apparent determination to defy the President and pass legislation over his disapproval. Cotton lagged, although rubber was again firm. Bonds were a trifle irregular. The dollar was steady in foreign exchange dealings.

Active specialties, both common and preferred shares, up 1 to around 4, included those of Manati Sugar, Budd Manufacturing, Dever Reynolds, Mallison Silk, Twin City Rapid Transit and Philadelphia Rapid Transit. Some of the alcohols were a bit firmer, as was General Motors and International Nickel. Among others, down slightly to around a point, were American Telephone, Chrysler, U. S. Steel, Standard Oils of California and New Jersey, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Pathe "A," Columbian Carbon, Auburn and Armour of Illinois preferred. The utilities were narrow. U. S. Smelting lost about 2 points and most of the other metals were a little lower.

On the whole there was not a great deal of bearishness noticeable in the majority of commission houses, but traders apparently were in no rush to expand commitments in most categories.

Held For Grand Jury On Charge of Arson

Peter Politka, 32, of Kerhonkson, a farmer, was committed to the Ulster county jail Monday to await the action of the grand jury on a charge of arson in the second degree.

Politka was arrested by Sergeant Hopkins and Chief of Police Richard Porter of Ellenville and arraigned before Justice Melvin D. Schoonmaker following an investigation of a fire in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Powers, Hickory street, Ellenville, on Friday night. The Powers were away from home at the time but the fire was discovered by George Low, a neighbor, who gave the alarm and the fire was extinguished by the firemen before it had time to spread.

Miss Swanson is a sister of Gloria, the moving picture star, and shows a striking resemblance to her.

That novelty was the chief idea in planning the N. T. G. revue was manifested by the snowball fight between the members of the cast and the audience, who hurled cotton "snowballs" back and forth as the Broadway theatre orchestra played a special arrangement at the opening.

Another part of the show in which the audience took a hand was the portion featuring the roller skating trio. Two boys from the audience answered a call for assistance on the stage and were whirled around so that they were unable to take their seats without assistance, being dizzy from the experience. After the two youngsters tried the experience, a young lady went up on the stage to get a taste of the dizziness and as N. T. G. himself would say, "bit off more than she could chew."

Stags Will Be Stags

Not all of the deadly battles that are frequently engaged in by buck deer during the mating season occur in their native forests. At Whipsnade zoo, a rural branch of the London zoo, it has been found impracticable to try to prevent such battles among the stags confined there and when the animals cannot be judiciously kept apart they are left to fight it out and the vanquished, if living, is shot or taken to a hospital. Formerly when trouble was brewing the keepers would remove the does, over which the bucks fight, to a separate, fenced-in enclosure, but this appeared to do no good. Among other methods tried in the hope of separating the bucks once a battle had started was to play the hose on the animal that appeared to be winning, but such tactics usually resulted in his fighting with even greater determination than before.

Far Fields

By LEETE STONE

© 1934 by the Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service

THEY were companions and they spoke to each other; each in his fashion; from their separate cages. One was a trusty in a penitentiary and the other was a golden canary. The living song of the bird and the crisp whistle of the man exchanged daily greetings across the straggling space that separated them.

This was one of the first days of spring to capture glorious geniality from the gently warm sun and faintly stirring air—nature's farewell to a dragging, bitter winter.

Number 991 pressed his cheekbones against the bars of his open window. Even the metal felt less cold and unyielding than usual. Zephyrs stirred his sandy hair which had become much thinner during the ten years of incarceration. This morning out of the ruts of resignation which had claimed his spirit from the first rose a consuming desire for the far fields of freedom and the nomad life that had once been his.

Eyes bent on his little chum whose cage hung in another open window over the way this wondrous April day, Number 991 indulged his whimsicality of guarded conversation: "Can we stick another winter here, little one?" he whispered.

Notes of song trilled over to him as if in direct answer.

"Meaning 'Cheerio' and 'Carry on' and all the rest of the uplift stuff," Number 991 muttered with a wry mouth. Nevertheless his shoulders straightened and he responded with a clear whistle.

About to turn away from the window, his gaze—which had been riveted on the cage—was caught by the sight of a child scrambling onto a chair which stood beneath it. The child was small, and had trouble making the grade; but finally stood on the chair and commenced fussing with the tiny door of the bird's prison. At once a woman appeared on the scene, removed the child with apparent scoldings, and pushed the chair away.

The significance of this ordinary incident flooded the man's mind with the conviction that some day the child would succeed with its mischief and his little companion would escape to those far fields of freedom that nagged their hearts perpetually.

Thus the idea of escape was born in Number 991 on this day of lovely promise which had suddenly new meaning for him. Amazed, and somewhat bewildered, he for the first time realized how many opportunities he had missed; wrapped as he had been during the years in the dull inertia of confinement and prison shop labor. The check-up of tools was often lax. It would be simple to confiscate and conceal files and oil. Nights were long in which to softly saw his bars.

He felt that escape for the little pal was destined. Why not for him, too?

The chance to secure tools came soon and Number 991 became a different man. He stepped out of the prison rut of resignation into the province of love of life. A thousand sleepless nights had taught him where the night guard of his cell-block would be at any given moment. No detail of secrecy eluded him. Night by night the four little rifts in two of his bars grew imperceptibly deeper.

Intimacy, also, progressed between the bird and the man. Never a morning that they did not exchange buoyancies:

"How you coming, friend?" Carolled over.

"Fine! How 'bout you, little one?" Whistled back.

And often the mischievous child stretched its arms high for the cage, reinforcing Number 991's premonition that freedom for them both was a certainty.

The morning came when all but the last few strokes of the file had been taken. A few more deft moments' work would spell separation of the steel, and—escape! Watching the bird across the way, the man's body stiffened suddenly and his cheekbones pressed the bars so closely that he feared they might give way.

The child was dragging a chair under the canary's cage again. Today! The child climbed on the chair; fussed with the cage door, and opened it. The golden bird winged swift flight through the open window, and downward, beyond the man's impetuous gaze that strove to follow.

Number 991's joy mounted to the peak of elation. The little pal was free to travel the far fields—travel with him—to indulge fantasy.

Number 991 remained long at the window planning his own escape for that very night. He dreamed as he sniffed the blossom-scented air hungrily. Then he noticed the little boy; shoulders drooped in penitence; go out of the house opposite and disappear around the corner.

But why did the child return running followed closely by a sleek black cat, and carrying something in small, cupped hands as he screamed for his mother. Number 991's eyes strained to see. They caught a glimpse of a lifeless little blob of yellow from which the feathers drooped awry.

Number 991 turned away from his nearly severed bars, despair in the deep lines of his sagging face. With a watchful look everywhere first, he flung the tiny files through his bars and they disappeared in the tall grass of prison acres just as the morning snap bell clanged through the corridors. Far fields indeed!

Rattlesnakes in Early Life

Rattlesnakes, which are approximately five inches long at birth, will try to rattle and bite almost as soon as they are born. And when they are but five or six inches long they are capable of injecting venom in quantities sufficient to require treatment.

Community Band Benefit Concert

The Kingston Community Band is making great preparations for the benefit concert and dance to be held in the new municipal auditorium Monday evening, April 30.

There will be a concert by the band from 8 to 9, to be followed by dancing for which music will be furnished by four different orchestras. About 50 musicians will take part in the concert and in playing for the dancing afterward.

The band is far from self-supporting, since although it filled many engagements the past year it received pay for but four of them—two city concerts, the firemen's parade at Poughkeepsie and the clambake at High Woods.

Among numerous occasions on which the band furnished music without charge were the NRA parade, the Boy Scout rally, the ball game between the Kingston and Newburgh police and tuberculosis hospital entertainment.

The members feel that they are entitled to generous public support at this forthcoming benefit as a fair acknowledgment of the many times they have freely given of their services for public affairs.

Legion Boxing Show Tonight At The Municipal Auditorium

Carl J. Doc Snyder the master of ceremonies around these parts for the boxing show all ready for tonight and expects a crowd at the Municipal Auditorium to watch the leather pushers do their bit for the relief fund of Kingston Post American Legion.

Starting time of the tournament is 8:15 o'clock and the fans say the first bout will commence promptly not because the mayor is anxious but because Perry Walsh of Poughkeepsie newly appointed commissioner will be on hand to see that the show is carried out along the lines laid down by the New York State Athletic Commission.

The card is as follows:

Main

Chester Matan, former Golden Gloves champion of New York and ex-sparmate of Max Schmeling, vs. Lou Foster, Passaic, ten rounds.

Semi-Final

Big Bill Freeman, former champion of New York State National Guard, Kingston, vs. Eddie Karolak, Albany, eight rounds.

Preliminaries

Joe Vosdick, Saugerties, vs. Cecil Flowers, Atlanta, Ga., six rounds.

Tony Rodriguez, Kingston, vs. Willie Gold, Brooklyn, four rounds.

Joe Rivers, New York, vs. Joe Torini, New York, four rounds.

Officials for the bouts will be Bill Singer, referee; John Finerty and Joe Kelly, judges; Sam Riber, announcer; Mort Finch, timekeeper; Perry Walsh of Poughkeepsie, commissioner in charge for the state.

The "no smoking" law at the auditorium will be strictly enforced by ushers and firemen. This is expected to help the fighters and boost the sale of tickets, as many ladies have been heard to say that they would attend if they did not have to stand the unpleasant smoke.

Mayor Heiselman Invited To Toss First Ball For Schryvers

The Schryver All Stars, Kingston's representatives in the semi-pro ranks, will open their season at the Kingston Fair Grounds Sunday afternoon with appropriate ceremonies that are expected to send the club on a successful jaunt over the road that leads to glory at the end of the diamond season.

Mayor Conrad J. Heiselman has been invited to toss out the first ball as part of the program for the inaugural of the national pastime here, and it is hoped that there will be a record turnout on hand to watch the leading citizen groove one over the plate and lend financial support to the hand of boys and their backer, William C. Schryver, who are eager to keep alive an interest in baseball.

Opponents of the Schryvers, as has been announced, will be the Hamilton A. C. of Brooklyn, featuring as its ace pitcher, John Dolecki, of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Starting time of the contest is 3 o'clock, and Boss Schryver has said that there will be no delay in getting the contest under way.

The Hamilton flinger, Dolecki, will be remembered as the one who twirled the Andes club to the championship in the mountain league last summer. He appeared during the season against the Kingston All Stars at the Fair Grounds. The rest of the Hamilton lineup is composed of practically all college players.

Ted Fraleigh is slated to start on the Schryver mound against Dolecki with Joe Hoffman behind the plate as his battery mate. The local infield will be Carpenter, 1b; Davitt, 2b; L. Bruhn, 3b; Bill Finger, ss. The outfield—Tiano, lf; Knight, cf; Lay, rf.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN J. GOULD

(Associated Press Sports Editor)

"It is safe to say" comments a Philadelphia critic of the annual baseball pennant polls "that if the majority of writers who expressed their opinions at the training camps had another chance May 16 the selections would be vastly different from the earlier views."

Maybe so, man, but that would subtract most of the fun from making preseason predictions, based on fact or fancy or both. Besides, who wouldn't like better with a thousand bucks. Whether it's on the love of pennant races? Lots of boys would like to recall their bets, no doubt, after the horses have left the barrier and covered the first quarter-mile of the race but that would reduce gambling to a more exact science and there would soon be no race-track gambling.

So, with the pennant races, our experts are entitled to their best guess before the games begin to count in the standing of the clubs. Since they can't nominate all eight in each major league to finish in the first division, some managerial feelings may be piqued, as appears to be the case with the veteran Connie Mack, whose club is picked to finish seventh. But that's no reason for the abandonment of an old custom.

As a matter of fact, since the experts survived the embarrassment of picking Mr. Will Terry's Giants to wind up in sixth place in 1933, they probably can weather the current season, no matter where Mr. Mack's Athletics finish.

Strong in the "Clutches"

It is, however, entirely within the bounds of reason to take the stand that training camp indications will not be worth much in the actual fire of the pennant campaign. There is plenty of precedent for a team showing a complete reversal of form, once the regular season starts, but this also happens to be a matter of absolute guesswork.

The Giants, on opening day against the Phillies, looked nothing like the club that was kicked around by the Cleveland Indians during the spring exhibition tour. With the pressure on again, they acted like world champions for the benefit of one of the biggest opening day crowds at the Polo Grounds in years.

Once he got it under control, Carl Hubbell's screw ball was just as effective and baffling as it was last year, before they added jack-rabbit juice to the National League ball.

Blondy Ryan, shifted from short to second base because of the return of Travis Jackson to his old post and the injury of Hughey Critz, fully justified his reputation for coming through under fire. No batting practice hero, Blondy has the knack of producing when it counts and what more can a manager ask?

Again, it looks as though the Giants have the type of defense that will mean plenty of victories and carry them through the "clutches" of a hard campaign, but it will be time enough to pass more conclusive judgment when they get more opposition than the Phillies seem able to furnish.

Vote of Resentment?

Except for Philadelphia and St. Louis, the opening game attendance for major league baseball was good news for the magnates, most of whom must stage a big rally in gate receipts this year to keep from wandering out on the financial rocks.

To some observers, the large number of Philly fans who stayed away from Shibe Park, even with Babe Ruth & Co. as attractions, represents a vote of resentment against the disposal of all the A's stars, excepting Jimmie Foxx. On the other hand, it may be that the cash customers prefer to wait and see what the current Mackmen do before any substantial support is accorded them.

In New York, Boston, Cincinnati, Brooklyn and Cleveland, the outpouring of the faithful justified preseason optimism.

"Big Three" of N. C. A. A. Champs

If Coach Bernie Moore of Louisiana State university can find a few point-winners to supplement the work of this trio L. S. U. will be a potent force in defense of its N. C. A. A. track title. Jack Torrance (center) is outstanding with shot and discus, Glenn Hardin (below) is a great 440 man and low hurdler, and Nathan Blair (above) is one of the country's best javelineers.

Increase of 112 Percent In Major League Homers So Far

By HERBERT W. BARKER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

If home run figures for the first seven days of the major league season furnish a true barometer, then injections of a little more "rabbit" have been made not only in the National League ball but the American as well.

Although National League batsmen have shown the greatest percentage of slugging improvement—more than 300 per cent-swatsmiths of the American loop, supposedly hitting at the same sphere they did a year ago, already have clouted nearly 60 per cent more homers than they did in the same period in 1933.

John Heydler's bombardiers, who could hit only nine homers in their first 21 games last season, have banged out 28 in the same number of contests this year, an increase of 211 per cent. In the American League, the figures for the first 20 games showed 17 home runs in 1933 and 37 this, an increase of 59 per cent. The general major league increase was 112 per cent.

These figures serve to confirm, partly at least, the claims of several American League batting stars, notably Babe Ruth, that the 1934 ball is much livelier, statements of the manufacturers to the contrary notwithstanding.

With three exceptions, every one of the 16 major league clubs has shared in the heavier home run production and those three at least have held their own in comparison with a year ago.

The figures by clubs, giving the 1934 home run total first and that for the correesponding period a year ago second follow:

National League: Chicago, 6 and 0; New York, 6 and 3; Brooklyn, 5 and 1; Boston, 2 and 0; Philadelphia, 2 and 0; St. Louis, 2 and 1; Pittsburgh, 3 and 2; Cincinnati, 2 and 2.

American League: Philadelphia, 7 and 3; St. Louis, 2 and 0; Cleveland, 2 and 1; Detroit, 3 and 2; Chicago, 3 and 2; New York, 6 and 5; Washington, 2 and 2; Boston, 2 and 2.

BILLIARDS

Gentile Victorious

Tony Gentile and Julius Tellier, two ex-billiard champions of Kingston, met in the round robin at Nick's Monday and Tony outpointed his rival 125-108. High runs were 21 and 23 for Gentile, 20 and 22 for Tellier.

HAYES BEATS FARR IN NEW YORK BOUT

New York, April 24 (AP)—Petey Hayes, featherweight, of New York and Saugerties, scored an easy ten-round decision over Johnny Farr of Cleveland at the St. Nicholas Arena Monday night.

Farr appeared slow and out of condition and Hayes, making the fight all the way, captured the verdict by a wide margin. He weighed 125¾ pounds; Farr 133.

English Tennis Ace Improved 30 Percent For Davis Cup Matches

His Assortment of Strokes and Livelier Ball Expected to Aid Britishers in Retaining Net Laurels.

By GAYLE TALBOT
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Wimbledon, Eng., April 24 (AP)—America's Davis Cup hopefuls, if they haven't already been advised of it, may as well learn now that they will be up against two important factors in challenging England for tennis honors this season. The first is a better and more confident Fred Perry, ace of the home team. The other is a new and livelier ball.

"I should say Perry is about 30 per cent better than he was at this time a year ago," declared Dan Maskell, professional coach of the British Davis Cup forces, after a brisk workout on the velvety turf of Wimbledon. "His backhand is much better, his forehand is sharper and his service was doing things today that I never taught him.

"Did you notice the way he was spanking them past me with that quick, wrist-action drive he's developed? Gosh, I couldn't see half of them."

Assortment of Strokes

Although he was playing only the second time since early February, Perry displayed an amazing assortment of strokes. His forehand, which he used now and then with a sort of whip-like action that caught Maskell flat-footed, bore little resemblance to the flat, medium placed drive he relied on last summer. It's a far more dangerous weapon.

"I used it a lot in Australia," he said. "It's a winner with this new and faster ball adopted by the International Federation."

The faster ball, incidentally, will be used both in the all-England championships here and in the Davis Cup contests. Maskell thinks it will help hard hitters like Frank Shields and Les Stoefen. But he doubts it will help them enough.

Favors England

"I don't see how any country can take the big cup from us this year," continued Maskell. "You just saw how Perry's playing, and I can vouch that Bunny Austin is playing the best tennis of his career right now. In fact he's reached his peak too soon and my job from now on is to ease him up aond keep him ready for the Davis Cup.

"So we have this pair—two of the three or four best singles players in the world—and a couple of first-rate doubles players in Hughes and Lee to help out. Tell me who's going to beat that combination."

WRESTLING LAST NIGHT.

(By The Associated Press)

Portland, Me.—Steve Passas, 175, New York, defeated Paddy Ioack, Philadelphia, two falls to one.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Jim Londos, 201, Greece, threw Jack Washburn, 245, Boston, 22:30.

Montreal—Joe Savoldi, [illegible], Three Oaks, Mich., drew with Jim McMillen, 220, Chicago, 90:00 (each won one fall).

Camden, N. J.—Joe Montona 179, Camden, defeated Speedy Scheaffer, 178, Toledo (two falls split, Scheaffer disqualified.)

Many Diseases "Extinct," Others Greatly Changed

It seems almost inconceivable that we simply do not know certain forms of disense which only a relatively short time ago were frequently observed, says a writer in the Illustrirte Zeitung, Leipsic.

Thus, for example, the "sweating sickness" was minutely described in medical works only a hundred years ago as a common disease. To all appearances, it was contagious and involved excessive perspiration. Nowadays, however, we can make nothing of these very detailed and thorough descriptions. The disease has become "extinct."

Chlorosis, which until the war was an extremely frequent disease of young girls, is now practically never seen. Physicians are at a loss how to explain this. Is it due to sports, or to the great amount of outdoor life that the present generation enjoys; or are internal secretory influences to be taken into account? Only hypotheses may be assumed to explain this strange fact.

Of greatest interest also are the changes which prevalent forms of disease undergo in the course of a few decades. Thus, all older physicians agree that nowadays acute articular rheumatism takes a different course from what it did at the end of the last century.

Only to a limited extent may such changes in a form of disease be traced to different methods of treatment. For instance, the treatment of scarlet fever has changed but little, and yet the illness is much milder than in earlier decades.

Structure Begun in 1663 Erected in Twenty Years

It was in 1663 that the Shah actually started to build the Taj Mahal of Agra, India, but his dreams and plans for it had been growing through every year since his wife's death. He had a wooden model of the Taj made and when he had satisfied himself as regards the perfection of style and beauty he sent for the most renowned workmen from distant lands. And tradition has it that 20,000 workmen worked for 20 years to build it.

The Taj Mahal when finished stood 213½ feet high, in a great park enclosed with a red wall. A marble water course lined with fine cypresses leads up to the building itself, which is perhaps the most perfect embodiment of feminine personality in the world. Its grace and purity of line symbolize Indian womanhood at its noblest. There is no suggestion of the rugged grandeur that befits a man's burial place, only the delicacy and softness that are supposed to be special womanly attributes.

The whole of the interior, as well as the exterior friezes, are inlaid with precious stones. The central tomb in which the lovely Mumtaz lies is surrounded by a screen of thin, translucent white marble, carved with designs of the greatest intricacy and framed with garlands of tiny fuchsias, tulips and everlasting flowers, gleaming with topaz, turquoise, porphyry and lapis lazuli.—Kansas City Star.

West Shokan, April 24—The first try-out of the Sunday morning session at 10:30 o'clock of the local Sunday school met with general favor. The classes were well filled and several new faces were seen. Mrs. Bertha Thompson, the superintendent, was in charge, and Miss Winifred Smith as primary teacher.

About 50 of the 80 members were present. The usual social program followed, which included the abundant serving of refreshments, featured especially by Mrs. Mitchell's homemade ice cream. WHY

Why New Gun-Firing Test May Not Prove Who Fired

A simple test, restricted until months ago to industrial uses, may become an effective device for solving murders and determining whether a person meeting a violent death has been slain or has committed suicide, says the United States News. Department of Justice experts are now studying the possibilities of the test, which makes it possible to tell whether a suspected murderer or assailant has fired a gun within 48 hours prior to the test.

Discharge of a firearm leaves specks of nitrate in the skin of the trigger hand of the person doing the shooting. These specks are revealed by the test. It is made by making a mold of paraffin or wax on the trigger hand of the suspect. After the mold is removed, it is explained by department officials, diphenylamine solution in concentrated sulphuric acid is poured upon the paraffin. If nitrate specks are present a deep blue color appears.

Department officials point out that although presence of nitrate specks is strong circumstantial evidence against a suspect, yet it is not conclusive, and the specks may have been gathered from some other source than gunpowder.

Why Compasses Do Not Point the Same Direction

Compasses do not always point the same direction. The deviation may be determined by this arrangement on the new part of the Kansas City Airport's taxiway, says the Kansas City Star. Its purpose is to enable airplane pilots to check accurately the compasses of their planes in order that they may make proper allowances in flight for the deviation. The airplane is placed within the circle formed on the concrete and in line with the arrow. The plane's compass reading then is checked against the indicating arrow, and the deviation, if any, is noted accordingly. The operation then is repeated in comparison with the other points of the compass as laid out in this permanent diagram. If the pilot finds that his compass is not accurate, he also finds out how much allowance should be made in determining directions.

Why Oklahoma Changed Capitals

Oklahoma City was more centrally located, and had other advantages. It was long planned to make it the capital when Oklahoma should become a state, but as a concession to Guthrie it was written into the enabling act of 1906 and the first state Constitution that Guthrie should remain the capital until 1913. Nevertheless, an election was held in 1910, at which the people voted to make Oklahoma City the capital. A series of court contests ensued, in which both the state and federal Supreme courts were called upon to rule on the matter. The election was held invalid, but a special session of the state legislature passed a law accomplishing what the vote had failed to do, and since 1910 Oklahoma City has been the capital.

Why Water Pipes Burst

In the case of tap water which contains dissolved air, heating the water may drive out some of the air. This has no considerable effect on the freezing point, but may make a difference in the character of the ice produced. Hot-water pipes are reported to burst from freezing more often than cold water pipes. This is not because of a difference of freezing point of the water, but is probably because the water in cold-water pipes contains dissolved air which separates on freezing and forms slushy ice; while when water in a hot-water pipe freezes, it is more apt to become undercooled and then freeze rather suddenly, forming compact ice free from bubbles which is more apt to break a pipe.

Why Æ Is Together

It is a character in Latin and Latinized Greek words. In English words of Latin or Greek origin æ is usually reduced to e. The tendency is to reduce æ to e in all words not purely Latin or New Latin, except proper names in their original forms. In some names of changed form the a has become permanently eliminated, as in the word Egypt. When æ represents the diphthong æ it should be distinguished from ae not a diphthong, the latter being commonly marked with a dieresis, as in the word aerial.

Why Language Is "American"

An excellent reason is because it is not spoken throughout the Americas. When the United States was colonized the language spoken here was precisely the same as the language spoken in England. Differences have developed, however, since that time which have led many students of language to come to the conclusion that the language spoken in the United States should no longer be called English, but distinguished in some way.

Why It Is Sing Sing

Sing Sing was the original name of the town in which Sing Sing prison is located, which has since been changed to Ossining. The name Sing Sing is said to have been taken from a friendly Indian, John Sing Sing, but another authority states that it is an Indian name meaning "place of a stone," and that the town was named from a creek that flowed through it.

Why They Are "Bluenoses"

The term originated from the idea that the climate of Nova Scotia is so cold that it gives the noses of the people a blue tinge.

Planting Trees at Boiceville Camp

Albany, April 24—Tree planting operations in seven reforestation districts and on 42 different reforestation areas in 26 counties are now in full swing. The work is being confined as far as possible to additions to existing plantations. The six forest tree nurseries of the Conservation Department are now shipping the stock to the various areas scattered around the state. The work in each district is being done under the direction of the district foresters of the department.

"A total of approximately 26,000,000 trees will be planted this spring," said Commissioner Lithgow Osborne. "The planting of these will complete reforestation operations on 74,715 acres and will bring the total acreage upon which planting has been completed since 1929 to 110,000 acres, or slightly more than 10 per cent of the entire program as set up by the reforestation amendment to the state constitution. The total number of trees planted on state reforestation areas in this period will be 86,000,000, including of course the 26,000,000 we are setting out now.

"Of the 26,000,000 trees it is anticipated that about 7,000,000 will be planted by the enrolled men from the present Civilian Conservation Corps Camps at McClure, Boiceville, Oxford, Pharsalia, Sherburne and Van Etten. Their services are provided without expense to the state other than general supervision and will result in a net saving to the state of approximately $30,000.

"The labor necessary for the planting of the remaining 19,000,000 trees is being secured in the localities where the work is being done and through the National Reemployment Service offices."

ZENA.

Zena, April 23.—Albert Shultis, superintendent of the Bethany Missions in Kingston, occupied the pulpit in the Reformed Church here last Sunday and was assisted by Miss Pearl Howard, also of Kingston. It was a unique experience for Zena to have a young lady in the pulpit but though still in her teens presented a most dignified and sincere reading of the scriptures and her prayers were spontaneous. Mr. Shultis chose for the topic of his sermon the parable, "The Prodigal Son", and also a stirring special message to the young folks. The young ladies of the church sang the anthem, "Hear and Answer Prayer", by William Kirkpatrik. Next Sunday Mr. Heidenreich will be in charge of services.

The young people's association of Lyonsville will present a play at the firemen's hall, Woodstock, the first part of May, (exact date not decided) under the sponsorship of the Christian Endeavor of Zena. "Always in Trouble" has been presented most successfully in several churches already and so a most pleasant evening is in anticipation.

Ebenetts and Thaisz from Catskill were in Zena Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Carle and family spent the day with their mother, Mrs. Ella Carle.

Mr. and Mrs. Orville Aldrich from Gloversville and the Misses Nellie and Carrie Cartright spent the week-end at the Cartright homestead.

100 Voices Have Part in Concert

Miss Josephine Lucchese

The concert to be given by the Saugerties Men's Glee Club and the Amphion Glee Club of Newburgh, with Miss Josephine Lucchese as the guest artist at the Municipal Auditorium on the evening of Wednesday, May 9, will be the finest big concert given in this city in fourteen years.

In May of 1915 Kingston had a big musical festival which was held at the then not entirely completed high school auditorium. At that festival a chorus of over 100 singers from Kingston, Saugerties, Catskill, Highland and nearer communities gave the Oratorio of The Creation, with a distinguished soprano and other soloists. The high school auditorium was filled with an audience that occupied even the window ledges as seats.

In May a concert will be given by the two men's clubs that have been conducted for years by Robert D. Williams, and there will again be a group of trained singers numbering over 100 voices. They will, however, give a wonderful program of finest and most enjoyable concert music instead of an oratorio.

The greatest difference between the two concerts however will be found in the soloist. Although the soloist of 19 years ago was a fine singer, she was in no way comparable to Josephine Lucchese, coloratura soprano of the Philadelphia Grand Opera Company who will be the solo artist on May 9.

The phenomenal success in North and Central America as well as throughout Europe, of the famous coloratura soprano, Josephine Lucchese, has been explained by a noted musical critic as follows: "With charm of manner, striking beauty, youthful delicacy, poise and grace, her personal appeal is that of a fresh full-bloom flower. Youth and beauty are great assets for an artist and Lucchese undoubtedly has these. But alone they would not have carried her very far. What has been the real cause of her phenomenal success is the remarkable beauty and charm of her voice, which is possessed of depth, pathos and great carrying power, coupled with her astonishing ability to change from the most taxing coloratura [illegible] and ornamental arias to the sweetest, simplest songs.

... the [illegible] memorable New York [illegible] in concert and grace [illegible] wide of Lucchese's greatest triumphs were scored in Buenos Aires, which she made her sensational appearance at [illegible] the Wagnerian Festival, at the Teatro Nacional, Havana, Cuba, where she sang [illegible] Berlin, at the Staatsoper, opposite the world famous Tino Rimbo, Titta Ruffo, Mardones and others, taking her audiences by storm.

Many music lovers of Kingston have already come under the charm of this beautiful singer, having heard her in Newburgh and Saugerties about a year ago. They are all delighted that their Kingston friends as well as themselves are to have the rare good fortune to hear Miss Lucchese in Kingston.

There has been a ready and gratifying sale of patron and single tickets to date, and the following names have just been added to the Patron Roll of Honor: A. Hymes, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd R.
